Terry's Strategy Fails in Big Sixth

Walks Lazzeri to Get to Red—Who Bounces Double Off Wall.

By Shirley Povich.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 7.—Large Charley Ruffing, 210 pounds of baseball athlete, laid to with arm and bat against New York's Giants this afternoon, and into the keeping of New York's Yankees passed the second game of the World Series.

The score was 8 to 1, a duplicate of yesterday's triumph of the Yankees, but today the Yankees had no mere pitching robot out there riddling Giant hopes. They had Charley Ruffing, a character who could beat the Giants with precious little help from the Yankees' murderers' row.

And if you're asking how Ruffing beat the Giants, then it might be said that Ruffing surrounded 'em.

Schumacher Hurls Today.

With his pitching he wove a constricting barrier around the Giants' batting forces, and then when he had reduced the National Leaguers to a state bordering on helplessness he clubbed 'em into complete submission with his bat.

Charley Ruffing has been a pitcher who has never overlooked his own batting duties. The red-headed mastodon on the mound has always been an emphatic dissenter in the notion that pitchers are not supposed to hit. Today he did not place all his trust in his own seven-hit pitching or the potentialities of the sluggers on his side. He took charge personally.

Hal Schumacher has been chosen for the pitching assignment for the Giants tomorrow, and Monte Pearson will take the hill for the Yankees.

Crowd Is Smaller.

Before the 57,675 customers, who tilted $229,952 into the World Series pot, Ruffing staged his one-man show. With a crisp single in the fifth inning he drove home the winning run for the Yankees. An inning later Ruffing was downright relentless. On that occasion he authored the hardest hit of the day—a two-bagger against the leftfield fence—and drove home two more runs. Three of the Yankees' first six tallies spawned directly from the bat of Ruffing.

In the box score it is revealed that the Yankees drove two Giant

Franco Reprieves Dahl After Court Orders Execution

By the Associated Press.

Salamanca, Spain, Oct. 7.—A Spanish insurgent court-martial decreed death by shooting today for Harold E. Dahl, American aviator, but Dahl was reprieved immediately.

The 28-year-old Champaign, Ill., flier, who was shot down by insurgents while he fought for the Spanish government, will be held in jail for further orders.

The insurgent chieftain had assured Mrs. Dahl that a prisoner exchange would be made, if possible, to spare Dahl's life.

In Paris, Mrs. Dahl said commutation of her husband's death sentence was a "great relief but not a surprise."

THE VERY REV. AMLETO CICOGNANI.

The papal delegate to the United States soon will have a new $480,000 Italian villa-type home.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, head of the diocese, yesterday made application for a permit to erect the structure at No. 90 Observatory circle, in the fashionable Massachusetts avenue embassy and legation section.

Original plans for the building call for the structure to resemble the Roman type of villa found in the Eternal City. It will form a stately link in the chain of embassies and legations which extends from Thomas Circle to Mount St. Alban's.

Specifically, it was understood, the architectural style will be Italian Renaissance, and the construction will be in brick, stone and concrete, 108 feet wide, 138 feet deep and three stories high.

The lot upon which the new home of the Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani, the papal delegate, and his staff will be built is 333 feet deep and has a frontage on Massachusetts avenue of 150 feet.

As neighbors the new structure will have the Norwegian legation and the British and Japanese embassies.

A large, formal Italian garden on a sloping terrain at the rear of the tract will preserve the Roman character of the new building. Its exterior will be of white limestone with a base of granite and a roof of tile.

Reception rooms will be on the ground floor, and a large entrance lobby, opposite which will rise a monumental type of staircase, up to the main, or first, floor. A chapel for the use of the papal delegate and his diplomatic family will be on the left side of the ground floor, and this section of the building will be divided into a series of consultation rooms, a library and archives for the storage of documents. On the right side will be the chancery.

On the main floor of the building will be a large reception room with connecting anterooms, large and small dining room and a smoking room, all arranged in a suite of inter-communicating quarters. The residential quarters of the papal delegate will be located on this

Extra Session Decision Due Within Week

Vast Unfinished Business Awaits Roosevelt's Return Today.

Farm Bills, Vacancies, Other Major Matters Pending.

By Robert C. Albright.

Important unfinished business, unfilled administrative vacancies and a still undetermined decision on a special fall session of Congress awaited President Roosevelt here last night as he left Hyde Park at 11 p. m. for a brisk five days in Washington.

With a four-point agenda for Congress already laid out, the President returns today to a heavily laden White House desk and a round of conferences that within the week should bring a decision on session plans.

Two vacancies on the Federal Reserve Board, at a period when business and stock market behavior was causing concern, awaited his attention—the resigned posts of Joseph A. Broderick and Ralph W. Morrison.

The new office of housing administrator remained to be filled. Although the Wagner-Steagall housing act has been in force more than a month, the housing authority has not been set up, nor an administrator named.

New SEC Vacancy Seen.

A vacancy on the Security and Exchange Commission, also at this time occupied with stock market movements, has yet to be filled, together with early prospect of a new vacancy. James M. Landis, former SEC chairman, already has left Washington for his new Harvard post, and Secretary of Interior Ickes was expected to offer J. D. Ross, another SEC member, the job of administering Bonneville Dam.

Following more urgent conferences with Secretary of State Hull on international developments, the President was expected to lose little time in consulting Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and other farm advisers before making up his mind on a special session call.

This morning he will face a press barrage of questions at his first White House bout with reporters since his Western tour. Saturday morning he will attend the funeral of Mrs. Harry L. Hopkins, wife of the Works Progress administrator. Next Wednesday he will return to Poughkeepsie for New York's 250th anniversary celebration.

Farm Bill Not Ready.

On the four measures suggested by the President for possible special session consideration—crop control, wages and hours regulation, Government reorganization and regional

U. S. to Avoid New Borrowing For 2 Months

Working Balance to Drop Under Billion; Bills to Be Refinanced.

The Treasury plans to borrow no new money during October and November, Secretary Henry Morgenthau said yesterday, even though the working balance thereby will be reduced below the $1,000,000,000 mark at which it recently has been maintained because of unsettled conditions abroad.

At the same time the Treasury head announced that on October 25 selling of the nine-month Treasury bills will be discontinued in favor of a bill to mature "on or about" March 15, the first income payment date of the next calendar year. The new bill will be issued on the same discount basis as was the old one. On October 11 and October 18, however, issues of the nine-month instrument, $50,000,000 on each date, will be offered. The same amount of the new bills will be sold weekly beginning October 25, all sales being designed to meet maturities of previously-sold bills.

Saying that the matter had been considered with the executive committee of the Federal Open Market Committee for several weeks, Morgenthau told reporters it was felt the Treasury could follow this schedule and still have a "comfortable" working balance, even though it would be less than $1,000,000,000. He declined to discuss any financing plans for later than December 1. The next regular financing date comes on December 15.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly bulletin, said the program recently worked out by the board and the Treasury to maintain easy credit conditions probably forestalled the necessity for member banks borrowing from reserve banks to meet fall and Christmas demands for money.

Included in the program were withdrawal of $300,000,000 of gold from the "sterilized" stock.

Zoning Inquiry Bars Shops in Walsh Mansion

Commission Opposes Commercialization of Massachusetts Avenue.

The District Zoning Commission yesterday turned down the application of the American Security & Trust Co., trustees of the estate of Mrs. Carrie Walsh, to rezone the Walsh property at 2020 Massachusetts avenue so that it might be adapted to commercial use.

The commission made clear that it is opposed to the commercialization of the fashionable residential area just northwest of Dupont circle.

The Walsh application, opposed by the Dupont Citizens Association and residents of Massachusetts avenue, aimed to make the now vacant mansion revenue-producing. The trustees can still build an apartment house or hotel, without business shops in front, but a spokesman told the commission at the hearing that the land was too valuable to make the investment profitable.

Other Pleas Rejected.

The commission rejected 12 other applications, granted six and a portion of several others, and deferred action on the remainder. All of the seven alley cases, except that of David H. Volland, were rejected. The Volland case was deferred.

Variances to permit the operation of parking lots were allowed for the first two cases, involving property on the east side of Twentieth street, between G and H streets northwest, and at 2402 N street northwest.

The commission granted the following applications:

Change from residential 40 "A" semirestricted area to residential 40 "A" restricted property on west side of Forty-fifth street, between Western avenue and Harrison street.

Change from first commercial 60 "C" area to residential 40 "B" area

Seminoles Plan to Leave U. S., Settle on Free Mexican Land

The Seminole Indian Tribe, some 3,100 strong, may desert the United States for Mexico, which has offered to settle them on a large tract of land, it was learned last night from William Zimmerman, jr., assistant commissioner of Indian affairs.

Zimmerman said he has unofficial knowledge of the negotiations of the Oklahoma tribe with President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico and understands "70 or 80 of them" already have visited Mexico and conferred with Cardenas.

"There is no reason why they should notify the Bureau of Indian Affairs," he said. "They are perfectly free to move wherever they want to." The negotiations with Cardenas are said to have been in progress for several months.

A choice of three or four sites in the Provinces of Coahuila, Chihuahua and Tamaulipas has been offered by President Cardenas.

A large hacienda in Coahuila, ownership of which is claimed by an American family of San Antonio, Tex., is the tentative selection of the tribal chiefs.

Confirmation of reports President Cardenas plans to expropriate the lands has not been received by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The Seminole tribe is one of the five civilized tribes which were settled in the Indian Territory, admitted to the Union subsequently as the State of Oklahoma. Many years ago land was distributed to the members of the tribe, but today few own holdings of any size and many have lost their properties altogether through sale or foreclosure.

America Votes On Neutrality

How does the American voter on the farm, in the factory, in the home and in the office feel about America's position in regard to war?

Do voters want stricter neutrality laws? Do they want a referendum before entering war? Do they want to leave the decision up to the President? Do they feel America's participation in the World War was a mistake?

Their answer will appear in the latest National poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion—Sunday, exclusively in The Post.

'Boycott Japan!' A.F.L. Shouts, Approving British Labor Plea; U. S. Refuses to Lead 9 Powers

Officials Scout Reports Treaty Signers Will Meet in Capital.

Roosevelt Back To Chart Policy

League Must Act First; Senators Comment; Saito Sees Hull.

By William V. Nessly.

The United States has no intention of playing host to the nine-power treaty at which steps are to be mapped to end Japan's warfare on China, although it is prepared to accept an invitation to a conference of the signatories, Government circles indicated last night.

With both London and Paris reportedly seeking to have the meeting held here, it was said in State Department circles the United States is not planning to take the leadership in making arrangements for it. Instead, The Post was told, this country will expect to receive an invitation to the meeting, after League of Nations powers which are signatories to the treaty have completed arrangements.

Roosevelt Returns.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt was returning to the Capital early today to direct from his offices here the Nation's course through the troubled foreign situation. The Chief Executive, back from his trip to the West Coast, is expected to confer at some length with Secretary of State Hull in latest developments in both the Far Eastern and the Spanish struggles, and later to discuss with the Cabinet policies to be pursued in this country's collaboration with the League's peace restoration efforts.

Closely preceding the President to the Capital was Norman H. Davis, America's "ambassador-at-large," who was summoned from New York to be on hand for conferences today on the foreign situation. He has been this country's delegate to numerous international conferences.

Mr. Roosevelt was in close touch with the State Department by telephone from his Hyde Park home, prior to his departure last night for Washington.

Unfavorable reaction to the Administration's stirring new steps came, meanwhile, from several sources.

From Boise, Idaho, the Associated Press reported friends of Senator William E. Borah quoted him as saying at a private dinner party last night that he "did not believe, under the circumstances now obtaining, that a conference under the Nine-Power Treaty will be conducive to peace," and as adding:

"We are all agreed that we want to keep out of war, but the question is how to keep out.

"No Conference at All."

"When we condemn one of the signatories of a treaty as having violated the treaty, it is useless to talk of a conference between the signatories of that treaty. A conference between the signatories of a treaty should precede the prejudging and the condemnation of one of the signatories."

"And if we have a conference between those who have not been

Japan's Embassy Assured U. S. Will Prevent Picketing

Yakichiro Suma, Counselor of the Japanese Embassy, last night said he was advised by the State Department that steps would be taken to prevent the picketing of the embassy today.

The department's assurances, according to Suma, came a few hours after the American League against War and Fascism announced it would sponsor picketing at the embassy at 5:30 p. m. today as a protest against the Japanese invasion of China.

Yesterday the league stated that the picketing will be the first step in a movement to enforce a boycott on Japanese goods.

Japan Defiant, Won't Join in 9-Power Parley

Staggered by U. S. Action, Statesmen to Prosecute War, Come What May.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Oct. 7.—The Japanese foreign office was quoted today as declaring that no matter what decision a nine-power conference may make, the Japanese empire's "fundamental policy" will remain unchanged.

The Domei (Japanese) News Agency reported the foreign office spokesman declared "Japan is confident she will prove equal to the contingency, no matter what measures the powers take against her."

Domei represented the foreign office as feeling certain, in view of the United States Department of State's disapproval of Japan's actions in China, that signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty would be called into session by the Lague of Nations.

Japan Won't Participate.

Japan is a signatory of this treaty which, among other things, binds the signers to respect the sovereignty of China. Nevertheless, the foreign office made it clear Japan would not participate in any meeting of the treaty powers.

"No matter what decision such a conference should take," Domei quoted foreign office officials as saying, "whether moral pressure, concrete measures or material sanctions against Japan, the empire's fundamental policy will remain unchanged."

Japanese statesmen were described as "surprised and bewildered" at President Roosevelt's declarations in Chicago concerning "concerted action" against aggressor nations and the subsequent State Department condemnation of Japan.

"We had been certain prior to

Il Duce Warned As He Delays in Hope of Victory

British, French Navies May Aid Loyalists; Wide Rebel Drive Imminent.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 7.—A warning to Premier Mussolini that a "very serious situation" will develop if he refuses to recall Italian troops from Spain aroused speculation tonight whether the British and French navies might be used to protect the Spanish loyalists against Fascist intervention.

The warning was delivered in Rome tonight when Anglo-French envoys called at the foreign ministry and asked an immediate answer as to whether Italy will discuss the volunteers question in a tripower meeting.

(In Milan, Italy, the newspaper Popolo d'Italia, regarded as Premier Mussolini's mouthpiece, said Italy will refuse to attend the tripower conference, or any conference on the Spanish situation to which Germany has not been invited. The newspaper said Italy would maintain the question of withdrawing volunteers should be handled by the nonintervention committee.)

It was generally believed Italy was seeking to delay discussions in hope the Spanish insurgents, who have thousands of Italian troops, could win a shattering victory over the loyalists in the meantime.

This theory was supported by reports from many sources that the nationalists plan to start a major offensive October 18 to cut off Valencia and Barcelona and isolate Madrid. New Italian bombing planes, one of which is piloted by Bruno Mussolini, son of Il Duce, have been sent to the Balearic Islands, supposedly to participate in the offensive.

Shelling Menaces U.S. Flagship, Rocks Shanghai's Foreign Area

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Oct. 8.—The thunder of war burst on the doorstep of Shanghai's foreign settlements early today when Japanese warships engaged in a duel with Chinese artillery batteries across the Whangpoo River in Pootung.

The dawn bombardment, the severest the conflict has produced, shook the whole city. Concussions shattered windows in scores of buildings along the international section.

Mass bombing raids of Japanese war planes earlier were reported to have killed more than 500 Chinese civilians in the rich southern province of Kwantung.

Under black, rain-laden skies, the deep-voiced guns of the Japanese warships, anchored in the Whangpoo downstream from the mouth of Soochow Creek, began to hurl shells into Pootung, once a rich industrial center.

As the shells ploughed Chinese positions there, Chinese guns blasted the waterfront and sent projectiles whistling into Japanese-occupied Hongkew, an International Settlement district.

The land and water battle endangered the U. S. S. Augusta, flagship of America's Asiatic fleet. The ship lay in an exposed position at the apex of the "battleship row" of foreign craft in the Whangpoo. Shells exploded in the water only a few hundred yards from it.

United States marines were imperiled when the Japanese flagship Idzumo fired over the International Settlement in an attempt to blast the Chinese out of their positions in

The Oriental Crisis

Secretary Hull asserted the United States will accept an invitation to a Nine Power Treaty conference but will not assume leadership in such a session nor request that it be held here.

'Boycott Japan!'

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 7.—The American Federation of Labor declared economic war on Japan today, with delegates to the federation's convention shouting their approval of a boycott on Japanese goods proposed by British organized labor.

Formal action on a boycott resolution will be taken later, but the delegates left no doubt that they would adopt it.

President William Green read a cablegram asking boycott support just after J. C. Little, fraternal delegate from the British Trades Union Congress, appealed to the convention to help promote peace by proposing "concerted action" of all democratic nations.

Stand Indorsed.

"The mere threat of such a combination would be sufficient to save the world for democracy and establish for posterity a system of collective security," Little declared.

Other federation leaders indorsed Green's stand.

After reading the cablegram signed by Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, Green said:

"If I can have my way, I will prevail upon this historic convention to join in a boycott on this aggressor nation. I know our answer to this appeal will be favorable."

While the applause still echoed, a delegate made a motion to send a favorable answer to the British at once. Green suggested it would be better to await a committee report, and the motion was withdrawn.

Text of Resolution.

The text of the boycott resolution:

"The militaristic fanatics now in control of Japan are waging an undeclared war, and have killed and wounded many thousands of innocent people.

"These fanatics are able to finance their atrocious activities only through dumping into the United States and other markets the products of exploited workers who are paid the equivalent of less than 5 cents per hour.

"These atrocious activities will continue only so long as the Japanese are able to secure the necessary finances through the sale of the products of their exploited workers.

"Therefore, be it resolved that the union label trades department (A. F. of L.) unhesitatingly calls upon all members of organized la-

Blind Approaches Make 2 Road Crossings Near Frederick Worst in County

Steep Grade and Winding Drive Form Death Trap at Steiner's Hill.

The State of Maryland once possessed finer highways than any other State in the Nation. Now, because of political bickerings and executive red tape, she stands twenty-fifth on the list. Believing that safety ought to stand ahead of the interests of politics, The Post presents today the sixth of a series of articles explaining the situation.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 7.—Two of the most dangerous highway intersections in Frederick County are on the outskirts of Frederick. They are the intersections of routes 15 and 240, 1 mile south of the city, and routes 15 and 26 little more than a mile north of the city.

At both intersections are blind approaches, and more accidents occur at these points than at any other place along the network of arterial highways coverging here.

Steiners Hill, between Jefferson and Brunswick, on Route 340, is another hazardous spot where numerous accidents occur. Steep grades, snake-like approaches to the bridge and the angle of the bridge itself all contribute to danger. Two large oil tracks have crashed and burned there within the last two weeks.

Route 26 Dangerous.

In the same vicinity, the crossing of the Brunswick-Knoxville road, along Route 340, marks another danger spot. Collisions there are frequent.

Probably the most dangerous curve in this section, by virtue of the number of accidents reported, is that on Route 26, about one-fourth mile east of Unionville. This curve long has since become known as "Death Curve." This highway is comparatively new, having been opened five years ago.

A blind curve on Route 40, near Plane No. 4, has been improved partially in recent years by the State roads commission, but remains a serious hazard. Whippers will Hill, near New Market on Route 40, once the scene of many of the accidents reported in this section, has been improved to prevent skidding. Few accidents occur at this point now.

Grade Crossing Cut Out.

Two major improvements in highway conditions in Frederick County were completed last spring. A grade crossing at Sabillasville, which had cost several lives, was eliminated by rerouting the highway through an underpass. A low underpass at Thurmont was widened and greater clearance provided. At this point a new culvert was erected to permit winding of the highway. Damage to trucks and cargoes at the low bridge at Thurmont had run into large figures.

With five major highways converging in Frederick, the city has been for some years "a traffic trap." On holidays and week-ends, continuous streams of traffic fill the city. Minor accidents keep police busy.

With the completion of the new dual highway between Frederick and Hagerstown, a major portion of the traffic along Route 40 will be diverted around the city over a bypass south of Frederick.

Completion of the new bridge over the Potomac at Point of Rocks about January 1 also will aid in dividing the traffic streams, it is believed. Traffic on Route 15, pending completion of the Point of Rocks Bridge, is diverted to Routes 240 and 340.

Union Gets 14 Days To Reply to Suit

Overruling technical objections raised by 141 defendants named in an alleged agreement to violate the Sherman antitrust law in connection with a strike that closed Gundersheimer's Bakery, Justice F. D. Letts in District Court announced he would extend for 14 days the time in which they must file an appropriate answer to the demand for $300,000 damages.

The bakery filed suit against the Bakery and Confectionery Workers International Union of America and 140 others because it was forced to close its plant several weeks ago. The bakery alleged it had contracts with its employes and had lived up to all union demands. Even so, a strike was called when the bakery allegedly refused to cease purchasing from a Philadelphia firm, which also was unionized, certain confectionery articles.

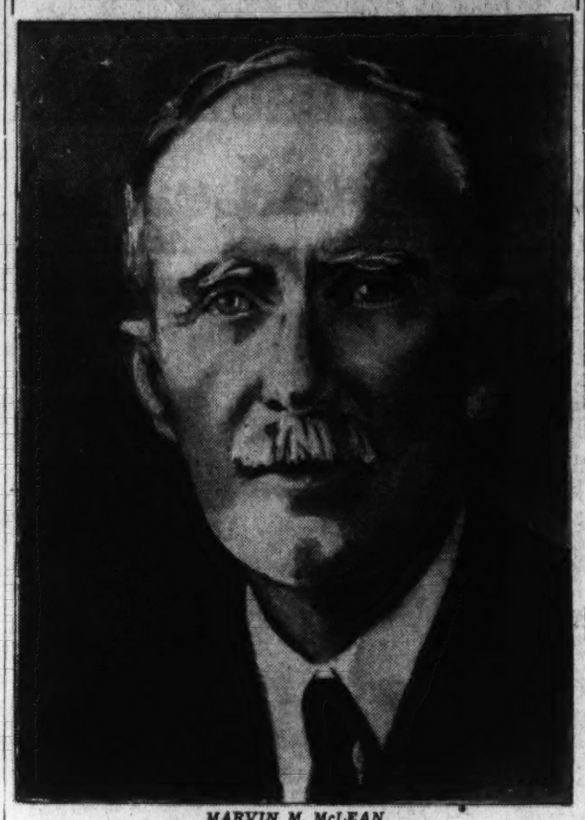
District Government Is Best, Declares Brookland Leader



MARVIN M. McLEAN.

M. M. McLean, Civic Association Head, Favors Taxation to Meet Needs; Opposes Suffrage for Capital.

By Christine Sadler.

Others can say what they please about the District government. M. M. McLean, president of the Brookland Citizens Association, thinks it is the best government in the United States.

"I am opposed to any form of local suffrage in the District of Columbia, and favor the present commissioner form of government," declares the 69-year-old civic leader, who has lived in Washington for 44 years and been president of the Brookland group for almost one-third of that time.

Furthermore—and stranger yet—Mr. McLean is not opposed to an increase in District taxes and favors boosting the District of Columbia budget to $50,000,000, if that is necessary to get additional school facilities.

Backed by Association.

He has his association members behind him on both the suffrage and taxation questions. They want a new and up-to-date school of 16 rooms, a gymnasium and auditorium for Brookland—and if that is going to take additional taxes, they will agree to them.

The school is the major objective of the Brookland group this year.

The association was formed in 1899 and is the oldest citizens organization in the Brookland section. Among its accomplishments recalled by Mr. McLean is the aid given in obtaining the Monroe Street Bridge about 30 years ago, getting a streetcar track across the bridge into Brookland, and getting Bunker Hill Park. The last-named project took 25 years. Mr. McLean presided at the dedication a year ago and thinks the quarter of a century of citizenship work it represents was well spent.

He is as proud of the work his group helped other associations to do as he is of that which was accomplished alone. It assisted in getting the site for the Taft Junior High School, a new bridge on Franklin street and the underpass on Eighteenth street.

Born in Texas.

Mr. McLean was born in Texas—70 years ago this November. His parents went to the State while it was still a republic under Houston, and he has been back every single vacation during his 44 years in Washington. He has read "The Raven" three times, thinks Houston one of the most remarkable men America has produced, and wouldn't stop voting in Texas—even if the District got suffrage.

He was graduated from the law school of the University of Texas and also from the George Washington Law School. In Wilson's Administration he was superintendent of the dead letter office. He is now associate attorney under the solicitor general of the Interior Department and assigned to the General Land Office.

When he says he is a Democrat, he means it. He keeps President Roosevelt's photograph hanging where he can see it all the time, is thoroughly and completely sold on the New Deal, and voted for Al Smith—although he is a strict Methodist and a prohibitionist.

Fought Red Rider.

One of the hardest fights Mr. McLean has made in the District was against the Red Rider and one of the happiest days was when it was repealed. It smacked too much of intolerance to suit his individualistic nature.

He is proud of his Scotch qualities and gives them credit for the fact that the Masonic King David Lodge No. 28 is out of debt and the new Brookland Methodist Church owes but $2,500. He was on the building committee of the new temple for the lodge, was chairman of the building committee for the church, and has kept a tight rein on the financial affairs of both.

Delegate to Federation.

The rose garden at his home, 1351 Newton street northeast, belongs to his wife, but he often gets credit for it. He has lived in Brookland ever since he married and has five children and six grandchildren living there.

In addition to being a leader in his community, he takes an active part in the work of the Federation of Citizens Associations, is one of the two Brookland delegates to it and a member of its public utilities committee.

On Monday—H. L. Colman, president of the American University Park Citizens Association, is next in the "Working for Washington" series.

G. O. P. to Convene.

St. Louis, Oct. 7 (AP).—Missouri Republicans will hold a "grass roots" convention at Springfield, October 9, State Chairman B. T. Mattingly, of St. Louis, announced tonight. The principal address will be given by Representative Everett M. Dirkson, of Pekin, Ill.

AFL Demands Laws to Help U. S. Employes

Denver, Oct. 7.—The American Federation of Labor, in convention here, today adopted sections of its executive council's report urging legislation for a 30-year optional retirement act for Government employes, 15-year terms for Civil Service Commissioners and collective bargaining for Government workers.

The convention also indorsed the council's recommendation that it reject a proposed resolution asking that Federal Civil Service employes be given the right to participate in political activities and to hold public offices.

Picketing of embassies also was opposed by the convention in adoption of another section of the council's report.

Approval was given the council's report deploring any curtailment of Federal relief to "bonafide sufferers from unemployment" and stressing the maintenance of prevailing wage standards.

Antilynch Law Urged.

Also approved were sections of the council's report urging passage by Congress of antilynching legislation; supporting legislation to extend farm ownership, and opposing employment of aliens on public buildings or works.

The convention indorsed President Roosevelt's governmental reorganization and economy programs but ordered federation leaders to be "watchful" that economy moves were "not at the expense of Government employes."

Convict Products Opposed.

To State labor federations, the convention recommended support of State acts fixing hours and wages for women and children in industry, abolishing industrial home work, and forbidding use of convict products.

Meantime, the wage and hour bill issue cropped out in two places.

The building and metal trades departments introduced a joint resolution assailing the Roosevelt Administration for not consulting the A. F. of L. in preparing the Black-Connery bill.

William R. Townley, a British delegate, was applauded when he quoted Ernest Bevin, president of the Trades Union Congress:

"We must consider carefully the question of how far the State should be permited to interfere in the regulation of wages and conditions. Our movement is a voluntary one and the claim for State regulation must not be carried too far."

Rod Plant, delegate from the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, assailed so-called Nationalist movements which he contended seek to separate labor groups of Canada and the United States.

Plant expressed fear that legislation enacted by a Canadian province ostensibly to curb communism may ultimately become a weapon against labor unions.

Permanent Control Of Coal Advocated

Pittsburgh, Oct. 7 (AP).—Chairman Charles F. Hosford, of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, advocated today permanent regulation of the soft coal industry by the Government, but under a plan evolved by the industry itself.

Speaking as a "fellow coal man" before 500 delegates to the National Coal Association's convention, Hosford said he believed a majority of men in the industry were still "in kindergarten" as far as self-government was concerned.

U. S. Selling More Munitions to China Than Elsewhere

By the Associated Press.

China bought more implements of war from the United States in the last two years than any other country.

Export licenses issued by the State Department since October, 1935, show purchases by that country of $13,605,190, mostly for military aircraft.

Soviet Russia ranked a close second with $12,195,109, largely because of orders last month for more than $10,000,000 worth of naval guns and armor plate.

Japan is well down the list with purchases totaling $2,343,245.

During the two years 8,612 export licenses were issued for war materials valued at $81,829,527.

Argentina, with orders totaling $7,462,128, was the largest South American customer for war instruments. Brazil bought $2,501,218 worth.

Compromise Reached.

On the controversial Eighteenth street northeast rezoning proposal, the Commission reached a compromise decision. It changed from first commercial 40 "C" area to residential property on east side of Eighteenth street between Monroe and Newton streets, but denied the change for the west side. It changed the zoning from Brentwood road to Lawrence street to residential 40 "A."

The Commission denied proposals to rezone any property abutting on Pennsylvania avenue between Minnesota avenue and Twenty-seventh street southeast, but deferred action on the other parts of the application.

Reds' Support Of LaGuardia Displeases AFL

35,000 Swing to Mahoney as C. I. O. Announces It Backs Incumbent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 7.—It became increasingly apparent tonight that New York's mayoralty campaign would bring about a major collision between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The signal for a break in the labor front, which had been backing Mayor F. H. LaGuardia for reelection, appears to have been sounded by C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis Monday night when he said he hoped the mayor would be returned to office.

Within 24 hours Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association and vice president of the A. F. of L. committee for the re-election of Mayor LaGuardia, announced he was switching his support to the Democratic nominee, Jeremiah T. Mahoney.

LaGuardia's strategists, who regard his indorsement by the American Labor Party as one of his chief assets, privately expressed fear that other local A. F. of L. leaders might follow suit.

Ryan, whose organization claims a membership of 35,000, said he was abandoning LaGuardia in favor of Mahoney because of the Mayor's Communist support.

Leaders of the C. I. O. unions and the American Labor Party were quick to retort. Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, said, "Joe Ryan has finally exposed himself as a 'stooge' for Tammany and reaction."

Current Is Blamed For Omaha Mishap

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 7.—The general court-martial trying Lieut. Comdr. Edgar R. Winckler, U. S. N., navigating officer of the cruiser Omaha, on charges of "neglect of duty" and "stranding the ship" in the Bahama Islands, heard testimony today that an uncharted current may have grounded the ship.

Winckler's testimony was that he had set the course of the Omaha for Castle Island light, "the usual procedure of other navigators cruising in the waters adjacent to Castle Island. The course was set just prior to the accident to provide clearage for the vessel around the dangerous reefs."

The testimony presented before the board of inquiry was introduced at the court-martial by Lieut. Solomon S. Isquith, judge advocate of the court and prosecuting attorney.

Shoe Unions Ask Senate To Study Chain Stores

Denver, Oct. 7 (AP).—Massachusetts shoe workers asked the American Federation of Labor convention today to urge a Senate investigation of the "chain-store system, as it affects the shoe industry."

Michael F. Lynch, supervisor for the Boot and Shoe Workers Union in the Haverhill (Mass.) district, told the convention by telegram that "chain-store buyers, using cheap, foreign-made goods as an excuse, dictate low prices to manufacturers."

Rail Plan Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

An independent committee of Missouri Pacific bondholders, headed by Charles A. Beard, petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday to refuse to consider any reorganization plan until all material requested by the Senate is made available for commission consideration.

Pitts Released From Lorton to Testify in Accountant's Tax Appeal

Former Banker Denies Claims Of His Ex-Aide

Never Authorized Hart to Make Trips for Him. He Asserts.

Prison doors at Lorton opened yesterday to permit G. Bryan Pitts, former Washington mortgage banker, to testify in behalf of the Government before the Board of Tax Appeals in a case involving Henry O. Hart, his former confidential accountant.

Pitts, who is serving a 14-year term at the reformatory for conspiracy to embezzle, took the stand and told the story of his business transactions with the accountant.

In the morning session yesterday Hart, who is now an employe of the Farm Security Administration took the stand to strengthen his petition for redetermination of alleged deficiencies in his income tax of 1932.

Hart testified before the board that he was employed by Pitts during the first ten months of 1932, negotiating with the F. H. Smith Co., of Wilmington, Del., relative to employment and compromise of conflicting claims to property.

Convicted in 1930.

Pitts, who began his sentence following conviction in December, 1930, was the former head of the Smith firm. He was convicted on charges of conspiracy to embezzle more than $1,000,000 from the company.

Later the F. H. Smith lodged a claim against the Government for more than $100,000 income taxes paid by Pitts, allegedly out of the embezzled funds.

Hart claimed the Treasury Department had erred in assessing certain "fees" and "interest" as income and in other ways.

Hart stated he had received no fees during 1932 nor had he received any interest. Furthermore, he said, in his business transactions for Pitts, which carried him to New York and Florida, he paid his own expenses to the sum of $5,386.64.

Testifying on this count, Pitts told the board that he had never authorized Hart to "make any trips for me."

A letter was produced by the attorney for Hart, which was addressed to a friend of Pitts' residing in New York. It was a letter of introduction of Hart to the New York friend, also asking for a personal loan to Pitts of $10,000.

Denies Authorizing Trip.

"Did you authorize Hart to make this trip?" the attorney asked Pitts.

"No, I did not," stated Pitts, "because I found it was not necessary since the friend was in Europe at the time."

During 1932, Hart said, he had to rely on loans to live, and that he did not receive any fees from Pitts. Severral of Pitts' bills were paid with these loans, he said.

"For some time," Pitts stated, while on the stand, "I had asked Hart for a statement of our financial transactions. On the day before I was removed to Lorton from the District of Columbia Jail Hart presented to me such a statement."

"The next day," he continued, "I made a longhand copy of the statement."

At this point a copy of this longhand copy was produced by the board as evidence to prove that Hart had received "income" from Pitts during 1932.

The whereabouts of the original statement which Hart gave to Pitts could not be learned.

The petitioner's counsel maintained that the copy presented by the board was in Pitts' handwriting, that there was no original available and that there was nothing to show that it was authentic.

Presiding Judge Eugene Black accepted the document as evidence, however, and the petitioner's counsel asked for an exception.

In accordance with the regular Board of Tax Appeals procedure, briefs will be filed by the petitioner and the board within 45 days.

Thomas Holds Church 'Could Do a Better Job'

Socialist Tells Convention of Protestants They Must Prove Ethics Valid.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 7.—Norman Thomas, who quit the Presbyterian ministry and became leader of the Socialist Party, declared bluntly at the Triennial Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church today that churches generally could do a better job.

"We want proof that the ethics of the church are meaningful and valid," he asserted.

He addressed the Church League for Industrial Democracy, whose campaign against the profit system has created widespread dissension in the Episcopal Church.

Meeting Jammed.

"We want evidence that under this ethical inspiration, churchmen can help to mould a new social order which does not make a mockery of our hopes of plenty, peace and freedom."

The League meeting, to which several laymen's organizations had strongly objected, attracted a crowd which overflowed the small theater seating 400 in which it was held. The audience included numerous bishops and clergymen.

Points to Spain.

Thomas declared the church "has made and is still making small contribution to the end of war and the reign of peace," adding that "only the other day the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church justified the cruel civil war in Spain for which the long policy of the church has a peculiar share of responsibility."

Earlier in an impressive ceremony with some 30 bishops participating, the woman's auxiliary presented its united thank offering, expected to total more than $1,000,000, the bulk of which will go to women missionaries.

U. S. May Ease D. C. Airport Takeoff Rules

Changes Weighed After Parley With Pilots and Companies.

Modification of existing regulations for the use of Washington Airport by transport planes will probably result from the conference held yesterday by Bureau of Air Commerce officials and representatives of the Airline Pilots Association and of the three transport companies which use the terminal, it was learned last night.

One suggestion, submitted by Samuel J. Solomon, manager of Washington Airport, would remove all regulations restricting take-offs at the field, retaining only those relating to landings.

Meanwhile, it was learned that American Airlines has "about decided" to make use of Bolling Field and is making plans for the transfer. Pennsylvania Central Airlines has indicated a willingness to follow the same course. Opposition to the move has been expressed by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, war ace general manager of Eastern Air Lines.

Pilots Favor Moving.

The pilots still favor moving all transport operations to Bolling Field, although David L. Behncke, their president, last night expressed doubt that such a course would be followed.

Howard E. Rough, assistant director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, declared, following the meeting, that "we had a very pleasant conference, but no conclusions have been reached yet. We want to get the reaction of as many pilots as possible to the present regulations."

"The meeting was highly constructive in character and many very helpful suggestions were submitted indicating that wish of all concerned to arrive at a sound conclusions. As soon as an opportunity has been offered to study the various recommendations, the department will announce any change deemed advisable, but until further notice existing restrictions are to remain in force," he concluded.

D. C. Clubs Barred.

Officials of the Aero Club of Washington were barred from the meeting at the last moment, after having been invited to attend, because they could not show any "financial" interest in the airport.

Chester H. Warrington, president of the club, said his organization believed that Washington Airport could not be made safe for the operation of the type of large transport planes which are now coming into general use.

"Furthermore," he said, "we object to the star chamber proceedings adopted by the Department of Commerce. In the final solution of the airport problem here the citizens of the District of Columbia will have to bear part of the cost, and they have a right to be heard and to hear what goes on so far as local airport questions are concerned."

Kenansville, N. C., Oct. 7 (AP).—A Superior Court jury convicted three colored men today of criminally attacking Mrs. T. R. Coe, 20, of Madison, Fla., August 18. They were sentenced to die in the gas chamber at Raleigh, December 17.

Health Group Opens Syphilis, Auto Drives

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Resolutions adopted at the American Public Health Association's convention here to day recommended remedies for two major causes of death in America, syphilis and automobile accidents.

The vital statistics section recommended that the President ask Congress for an appropriation to make a Nation-wide survey of accidents. More adequate training of technicians for the diagnosing of syphilis was proposed by the laboratory section.

Paralysis Takes Downward Trend

A downward break in infantile paralysis cases throughout the country was noted yesterday by the United States Public Health Service, though 1937, officials say, already is certain to be one of the most disastrous poliomyelitis years in two decades.

A Nation-wide total of 603 cases was reported during the week ended October 2, which was more than twice the figures of the corresponding week last year, but 127 cases below the number reported the week ended Setpember 25.

For the first 39 weeks of 1937, cases reported to the Public Health Service totaled 7,724, compared to 2,828 for the same period last year.

Youth Admits $6,000 Theft to Furnish Home for Bride

Architect Was to Marry Soon; Burglar-Proof Locks Stolen.

Norman E. Langmaid, a young architect, languished in a cell at the Eighth Precinct Station last night while detectives checked through $6,000 worth of stolen household furnishings with which, they said, Langmaid intended to equip a home for his bride-to-be.

Langmaid, 22, has confessed, Police said, to burglarizing four model houses in the Chevy Chase area in the last month. They recovered in Government warehouses here and in Baltimore, they said, $2,000 worth of rugs, radios for the home and car, electric lighting fixtures, several burglar-proof locks, and even tools for making repairs around the new home.

On one occasion, the officers charged, Langmaid visited a home in the 4500 block of Brandywine street, which he had helped to design and took the house numbers.

No formal charge has been made against Langmaid, who was arrested Wednesday night after Detective Sergt. Wilton J. Lambert and Detective R. J. Felkner, acting on information from Baltimore police, had watched the suspect's home in the 5800 block of Nevada avenue for three days and nights.

Police said most of the property had been recovered, some of it in the suspect's home when he was arrested. Negotiations were being made for the return to Washington of loot found in Baltimore.

Langmaid's fiancee, police said, had no knowledge of the alleged thefts.

Model Homes Robbed, Architect Held

Metropolitan police detectives examine a part of the loot recovered from model home burglaries. Rugs and other household furnishings valued at $6,000, they said, were stolen by a young Washington architect who wanted to furnish a home for his bride-to-be.

Labor Group Hails Detroit Election

Labor's Nonpartisan League said yesterday that the Detroit elections are "an indication of what can be done in every industrial city in America when labor is properly organized for political action." The league added:

"The Detroit elections followed after only a very brief period of intensive organization activities. The labor political organization set up in the course of this campaign is to be continued permanently and will be broadened to cover the entire State of Michigan.

"Labor's Nonpartisan League will assist in the development of similar political activities throughout the country. Responses from all over the country indicate that the Detroit situation is only a curtain raiser for what may be expected in the 1938 elections."

Cohen Pleads Life For Utility Act

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Benjamin V. Cohen, member of the Washington duo of "Cohen and Corcoran," advisers to President Roosevelt, today urged the United States Circuit of Appeals to uphold the public utilities act of 1935.

Cohen, special Assistant Attorney General, appeared for the Government in Electric Bond & Share Co.'s appeal from the decision of Federal Judge Julian W. Mack that the registration section of the act was separable from regulatory provisions. Electric Bond & Share, a utility holding company, sought a ruling on the constitutionality of the entire act.

Attacking the act, John F. McLane, of counsel for the company, said: "The Government is merely using its power over commerce to force corporations to submit to a system of Federal control."

Grand Jury Gets Safe Theft Case

Henry R. Milton, alias Arthur R. Lutzweit, accused of having stolen a safe containing $2,000 from a southwest market several months ago, was held for the grand jury under $5,000 bond before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday.

The cases of two men, charged respectively with destroying private property and assault, were continued for one week, each depositing $25 collateral. They are David B. Moorman, 417 Riggs road northwest, and James Rucker, colored, 961 Twenty-fifth street northwest. The offenses are alleged to have occurred in connection with the truckmen's strike.

Kosher Butchers Will End Strike; Claim Price Cuts

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—The shop-closing strike of 5,000 Kosher butchers protesting against high wholesale prices of meat in the metropolitan area will end Saturday, David Greenwald, attorney for Federation of Kosher Butchers, announced tonight.

The action was taken in deference to requests made by State and city officials. The federation announced it would have representatives at Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's conference tomorrow at which Secretary of Agriculture Wallace will join in an investigation of meat prices.

Tht stoppage strike served its purpose in reducing meat prices, federation officials said.

Fists and Bullets Fly As French Parties Meet

Lyon, France, Oct. 7 (AP).—Hissing gave way to blows and gunfire tonight when members of Col. Francois de la Rocque's Social Party clashed with a Communist Party group in the streets of nearby Saint-Fons.

One person was wounded seriously and several suffered minor injuries in the battle, the second between members of the parties in two days. Ten were hurt last night in a clash in Meaux.

Girl Attacked, Slashed, Hurled Dead Into Mine

Mountaineer Confesses; Taken to Police Barracks After Mob Gathers.

By the Associated Press.

Greensburg, Pa., Oct. 7.—State motor policemen questioned a 37-year-old father of two tonight about the slaying of his 11-year-old cousin, Vallie Bates, whose body was taken from the air shaft of an abandoned mine near Latrobe.

Harry Bates, who lived alone on the outskirts of the Allegheny Mountain town, said he had attempted to attack the child, struck her over the head and slashed her throat with a paring knife, according to police.

Bates led State motor police to the mine shaft in the early morning darkness. The girl's body was found wrapped in a burlap bag at the bottom of the shaft.

Bates, a brick worker, was removed from the Latrobe borough jail to the State motor police barracks at Greensburg after scores of neighbors and townsfolk massed about the little jail building.

Capt. Jacob Mauk, of the State police, said Vallie, who lived nearby with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bates, had visited Bates after school to help with his house work.

The girl screamed when he attempted to attack her, Hauk said Bates told him, and he choked her and hit her on the head with a heavy shoe. As she began to regain consciousness, Bates was quoted by the officer as saying, he cut her throat, then poured kerosene over her clothing and threw it under the porch.

Borah Clarifies Defense of Black

Boston, Oct. 7 (AP).—Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, today told the Christian Science Monitor by telegraph that in defending Justice Hugo Black in the Senate last August against charges of Ku Klux Klan membership he did so in the belief that the Alabama Senator "was not at the time and for years had not been a member of the Klan."

Borah, on August 17, told the Senate, "there has never been at any time one iota of evidence that Senator Black was a member of the Klan."

In reply to an inquiry, the Idaho Senator said his statement did not mean there was no evidence that Black never had joined the organization, but meant he was not then a member.

Physicians at Sibley Hospital, where the injured woman was taken, said her condition was undetermined.

John Lawrence, 20, of Montpelier, Vt., driver of the car with which Mrs. Welker's crashed, was charged with reckless driving, as was Mrs. Welker. The driver of the third car, Edward A. Spargo, 50, of 2620 Brentwood road northeast, was charged with not having an operator's permit.

this that the United States understood the situation better than any other country in the world," high-ranking statesmen said as Japanese officials were called into emergency session at the foreign office to discuss the news from Washington.

"We felt that the American public was completely enlightened and was traditionally neutral. We completely fail to understand the American action, which is bound to make a very bad impression on the Japanese public."

Japan's views were reasserted by Gen. Gen Sugiyama, minister of war, who asserted Japan wants no Chinese territory, but is solely concerned with punishing those Chinese leaders responsible for anti-Japanese sentiment.

"Apparently there is much misunderstanding in the world regarding Japan's aims," the grizzled general said. "To state them simply, we are determined to punish the elements in China responsible for anti-Japanism."

He said this meant "smashing them until they surrender completely, until they hold their hands high and cry for Japan to cease."

Special Session, Farm Legislation, Vacancies, Round of Conferences Await Roosevelt Today

planning agencies—Congressional committees have laid a substantial groundwork.

But the new farm bill, his principal argument for early Congressional action, was far from ready. The first contingent of a Senate Agriculture sub-committee was holding hearings among farmers in the West while a second sub-committee was not scheduled to open hearings in the South until October 15.

These two groups will not meet jointly for pooling of data until October 27, in Oklahoma City. Afterward they must return to Washington to draft a bill. Meantime, Agriculture Department experts, who virtually had abandoned hopes for a special session, were assembling basic control data in preparation for the possible call.

Two probable deterrents to the call remained—a certain storm of Congressional controversy regarding the appointment of Justice Hugo L. Black and equally certain protests from members of the mandatory neutrality bloc on the President's departure from the neutrality act.

It was suggested here that the President might prefer to go before Congress for support of his foreign course, or even seek repeal of the neutrality act's more compulsory features.

Senate hearings on the President's bill for regional planning agencies, definitely on the new legislative agenda, already have been completed, and a favorable subcommittee report is before the Senate Agriculture Committee. The House Committee, where opposition testimony was more pronounced, has not completed hearings.

Sponsored in the Senate by Senator Norris of Nebraska, the bill divides the Nation into conservation authorities, similar, but with less authority, than the TVA. Designed to collect data, and submit planning recommendations to Congress, the proposed regional authorities would cover the Atlantic States, the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley, the Missouri Valley, the Arkansas Valley, the Colorado River area, and the Columbia Valley.

Government reorganization legislation already has started on its course through Congress. Handling the President's proposed bill in four parts, the House already has passed bills giving the President two-year authority to reorganize, abolish and consolidate agencies, and to give Mr. Roosevelt six administrative assistants. The two remaining bills, providing Civil Service reorganization and limiting the Comptroller General's office to powers of post audit, still await House action. The Senate Reorganization Committee has combined all four phases in one omnibus bill, which is now on the Senate calendar.

The President's wages and hours bill, which forced adjournment when it became snarled in the House Rules Committee, spelled further extended controversy in the next Congress. Passed by the Senate, and favorably reported by the House Labor Committee, this measure could not be budged from the House Rules Committee last session, Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Labor Committee, will resort to a House petition to shake it loose.

Rebels Capture 2 British Ships Off North Spain

Italian Boat Reports Attack by Unidentified Plane in Mediterranean.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 7.—Two British ships were captured by an insurgent trawler off the north coast of Spain and an Italian steamer reported she had been attacked in the western Mediterranean by an unidentified seaplane today.

The British ships Yorkbrook, 1235 tons, bound from Antwerp to north Spain with food supplies, and the Dover Abbey, once chartered by the Ethiopian government in an unsuccessful attempt to bring arms against Italian invaders, "presumably" were in Spanish territorial waters, the admiralty said in announcing the capture.

The Italian steamer, Ettore, wirelessed that the plane disappeared after firing several shots, Lloyds reported. She was bound from Amsterdam to Genoa and had passed Gibraltar yesterday.

Ludlow Urges Use of Neutrality Act to Stop Assistance to Japan

Cash and Guns Sent to Nippon, Indianan Says

Anti-War Group Told Conflict in East Would Tax Navy.

Charging American money and material are assisting Japan to wage war on China, Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, yesterday advocated immediate application of the neutrality act in a speech before the annual conference of the National Council for Prevention of War.

At the same meeting, William T. Stone of the Foreign Policy Association declared, "The President's Tuesday speech established a change of policy which may involve the use of force. In that case, we have a right to know what the cost of such a program will be. Military operations 7,000 miles from our shores will require a navy at least twice the size of our present navy."

Sanctions Opposed.

Another conference speaker, Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, of New York, (retired), yesterday told The Post he questions wisdom of American co-operation with England and France in any sanctions against Japan.

A veteran of both Spanish-American and World Wars, Rivers said effective economic sanctions could not be hastily improvised in the present crisis and that the United States might easily find itself left alone "to undertake a task that is not her primary concern."

He said unofficial attempts to boycott Japanese goods would only solidify Japanese opinion.

Rivers questioned whether "France and Britain really desire to protect the territorial integrity of China, or do they need our aid to protect the Chinese territories which they took by force of arms from China?"

Russia Not in Treaty.

He believes the general accusation against Japan of violation of the Nine-Power Treaty overlooks the imperfections of that treaty, which made no provision for amendment or renewal and was concluded without the signature of Russia, the third great Far Eastern power. "While Japan has been bound as to the size of her fleet and her armies on the mainland, Russia has been free."

Rivers added that Japan did not take Manchuria from China, but from Russia, which "had occupied parts of Manchuria for nearly 30 years and had a 99-year lease on most of the country." He said the League of Nations had made no protest against Russian penetration of Outer Mongolia.

"Japan," he continued, "is the only nation in a position to aid China—to stabilize the country and give it the advantages of good order and government, of roads and railways, better schools, better hospitals and other improvements. The future of Eastern Asia can only be settled by the people who live there."

Shanghai Shelling Rocks Foreign Area

A steady succession of shells fell near the sector guarded by the marines on the northern boundary of the settlement.

The Chinese Central News Agency reported a massed flight of 36 Japanese fighting planes, including mammoth bombers, followed the line of the Canton-Hankow Railroad across Kwantung Province. They attacked a dozen railway centers, Chinese dispatches said, killing and wounding more than 300 noncombatants in those towns alone.

The raiding planes were said to have caused several hundred more casualties in northern Kwantung.

Seventy Chinese warplanes drove off the invaders before they could inflict much serious damage on the railway. The Chinese airmen were said to have shot down eight Japanese planes.

Ten miles northwest of Shanghai the opposing armies fought in mud for possession of the Shanghai-Liuhong motor road. Day-long rains had made the 25-mile battlefront from the North Station northwest to Lotien a treacherous muck. Chinese poured out from their pill boxes and sandbagged trenches to rush the Japanese with ancient big swords and modern bayonets.

Japanese gave ground between the Kiangwan race course and Liuhong. The Japanese laid down a vast smoke screen to cover counter-flanking maneuvers carried out under a withering Chinese fire. The armies remained in a deadlock.

bor, the friends of organized labor and all persons opposed to the unscrupulous tactics of the Japanese fanatics to boycott the products of Japan, and, by refusing to purchase such products, contribute toward the speedy elimination of these warlike activities."

Green prefaced his remarks on Japan by asserting the United States must keep out of any foreign war.

"We are firmly resolved here, representing millions of people in America," he said, "that this country shall not and must not be drawn into any war situation which may develop abroad. . . . But we want to join our fellow workers abroad to prevent war. That's the reason we joined the International Federation of Trades Unions."

Berlin to Stand Aside.

Berlin, Oct 7 (U.P.).—Informed quarters said tonight Germany is determined to abstain from any "judgment" in the Far Eastern conflict with the United States' denunciation of Japan.

The Reich government, it was explained, will make no official declaration because it has no political interests in the Pacific and considers the origin of the war there to be highly controversial.

Tokyo Press Warns U. S.

Tokyo (Friday), Oct. 8 (A.P.).—The Tokyo press warned the United States today to continue her neutrality, in editorial comment on the State Department statement condemning Japan as a treaty violator in China.

Typical comment follows:

Miyako—"It (the United States' action) is liable to disturb the peace in the Orient, giving rise to a world conflict."

Kokumin—"Interference of any third power will only prolong the present conflict."

Yomiuri—"What made the United States change policy so suddenly? Why did America, after adhering to a policy of strict neutrality in the Spanish civil war, lose her cool head and come to pull chestnuts from the Far Eastern fire?"

Chugai—"The United States judgment of Japan's actions is unfortunate, but need not surprise us."

Asahi—"The United States possesses the fairest conception of world affairs, especially regarding the Far East. All intelligent Americans know its foreign policy will continue to be directed with discretion and caution. Thus, United States support of the League is most likely to be confined to moral support, and even if it accepts the League's invitation to a nine-power conference, it is not imaginable that the United States will entirely disregard Japan's position and claim."

Nanking, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek declared today President Roosevelt's exposition of the sanctity of treaties gratified not only the suffering people of China but all weak nations.

He added that the President's statement was gratifying to those greater nations which realize enduring peace can be built only upon foundations of strict international morality.

In an interview, Chiang said:

"Happily we learn that the State Department in Washington had condemned actions of aggression. By this upholding of international faith, justice and the sanctity of treaties, I am profoundly moved.

"We are as determined as ever to defend ourselves to the utmost. Not until justice is upheld and the sanctity of international treaties is observed, do me cease our resistance."

"If other nations who have signed treaties are unable to prevent violation of the laws, thus allowing Japan to continue without restraint this ruthless war, it is tantamount to assisting Japan and destroying us."

Recalling Japanese entrance into Manchuria, Chiang said:

"With the repetition of a similar procedure throughout China, Japan indicates she believes she is above treaties and international law.

Conservatives Irked.

London, Oct. 7 (U.P.).—The Daily Star's gossip column said tonight that the British foreign office was "not exactly pleased with the manner in which British public figures have welcomed President Roosevelt's speech."

"The welcome lends too much encouragement to Liberal and Labor views in regard to Japanese aggression, and behind the doors they are calling it 'The New Sermon on the Mount.' The mount is Mount Blanc, diplomacy's cynical quip at the expense of the White House."

Duce Indicates Refusal of Bid To War Parley

League Initiative Assailed; Reich Is Expected to Stand With Italy.

By the United Press.

Rome, Oct. 7.—The Italian government intimated strongly tonight it would refuse to attend the projected nine-power conference on the Sino-Japanese War even though it is one of the original signatories of the treaty signed in Washington in 1922.

Italy's opposition to the proposal, it was stated officially, is based on the fact that initiative for the conference came from the League of Nations, which Premier Mussolini has boycotted consistently since the Italo-Ethiopian sanctions crisis two years ago.

Fascist leaders emphasized Italy's attitude toward the suggested conference is the same as Germany's.

This indicated the Reich, although not a nine-power signatory, must turn down the invitation which she is expected to receive. France and Great Britain are prepared to invite Germany and Russia to the conference because of their Far Eastern interests.

Virginio Gayda, whose newspaper Giornale d'Italia often reflects Mussolini's views, tonight attacked President Roosevelt, Great Britain and the League for "confusing" the Far Eastern issue and closing their eyes to the "the national needs of certain countries."

Nazis Assail Arms Sales.

Berlin, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—The controlled Nazi press professed tonight to be puzzled over what it described as the discrepancy between President Roosevelt's Chicago peace address and large American arms sales to Soviet Russia.

The Berliner Boersenzeitung said that since the Bolshevist program of world revolution aims in this direction "it really is difficult to grasp the fact the United States, nevertheless, is ready to sell Soviet Russia war materials which can only serve the purpose of further destroying the peace of the world."

The Berliner Tageblatt said: "This supplying weapons to professional disturbers of social and international peace rips the toga of peace right through the middle."

Soviet Circles Pleased.

Moscow, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull's condemnation of Japan's undeclared war against China caused a mild sensation in Soviet circles today. Officials made no effort to conceal their pleasure at the State Department's outspokenness.

Boycott of Japan Would Result in Silkless Women

By the United Press.

American women who demand silk stockings and silk panties and those who parade silk evening gowns on the dance floor will be asked to make the major sacrifices if an economic boycott is organized against Japanese goods, trade experts said last night.

Department of Commerce statistics show that in recent years at least half the imports from Japan have been silk. In 1936 93 per cent of all America's silk imports came from Japan. China and Italy supplied the bulk of the remaining 7 per cent.

Pope Is Angered By Duce's Charge

Vatican City, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Pope Pius was represented by prelates today as being indignant over a front page editorial in Premier Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, linking "vacillating Catholicism" with communism, socialism and other things objectionable to Il Duce.

They believed the pontiff would take advantage of a public audience in the next few days to express to the world his opposition to the views expressed in the article.

The Mussolini article said: "Capitalism, parliamentarism, democracy, socialism, communism and certain vacillating Catholicism with which sooner or later we shall deal in our style, are against us."

Storm Kills Dozen And Cuts Off Rome

Rome, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Emergency squads worked throughout a large part of Italy tonight repairing telephone lines, railroad bridges and other structures damaged by a violent storm and swollen rivers. About a dozen deaths were reported.

High winds and rain, sweeping down from the Apennines reached Rome, breaking telephone communications with the rest of Europe. San Pellegrino reported five dead in an avalanche.

Fidelity Opening Certain as O'Connor Accepts New Plan

Shareholders To Get 85% Of Each Dollar

Revised Offer Disregards Proposal for Acceptance by 75%.

Reopening of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association as the First Federal Savings and Loan Association was assured yesterday when Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor approved revised plans, which disregarded the "75 per cent proposal."

Acting on a letter from Harry P. Somerville, president of the First Federal, the comptroller stated:

"In reference to your letter advising that the First Federal Savings and Loan Association is willing to proceed with the purchase of the assets of the Fidelity on the basis previously proposed, whereby the shareholders of the Fidelity will be paid 85 cents on a dollar and that the First Federal will waive its previous requirement that 75 per cent of the shareholders consent to accept share accounts in the First Federal, this revised offer is accepted, subject to court approval."

All In Agreement.

Action will be taken immediately to make the transaction complete, as the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the First Federal agree with the comptroller in the details of the proposal.

A suggested draft of contract covering the transaction in its modified form, together with an appropriate petition to be filed with the court for approval of the transaction, was forwarded to the First Federal by the comptroller's office.

The comptroller said:

"Our general counsel will be glad to meet with the representatives of the First Federal and of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board at any time to consider further details or any suggested modifications in the contract or court petition."

A contract which must be approved by the First Federal and the bank board has been written for the transfer of the assets. It will be presented to the court by the receiver of the closed bank, James H. Nolan.

The contract, along with a petition by the receiver asking that the court grant approval, will be presented "in a few days," officials stated.

The comptroller asked the First Federal that when the contract has been agreed upon in final form resolutions be adopted by the First Federal and by directors of the bank board officially approving the contract.

May Open in Two Weeks.

Before any transfer of assets can be made the court must issue its approval. No time will be lost, officials said, in attempts to reopen the new bank.

The institution probably will open in "two weeks," they stated.

In his letter to the comptroller, Somerville stated that "the consents which have been filed with the receiver clearly indicate to our board of directors that a very substantial majority of shareholders of the Fidelity is in favor of the plan of reorganization."

The reorganization plan which was submitted to the 18,000 shareholders on September 4, was accepted by depositors representing 63 per cent of the approximately $4,400,000 share liability.

Directors of the First Federal, Somerville said, were convinced there is every probability of a successful reorganization, and that the bank can begin operations on a normal basis without restrictions upon withdrawals, so that the shareholders who desire cash will receive it.

Duce's Son Sleeps; D. C. Visit Delayed

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Vittorio Mussolini, son of the Mussolini, arrived in New York today for what was described as a sightseeing trip, and promptly went to sleep.

His plans for the remainder of his first, brief visit to the United States were vague. Reports that he was called home by his father were denied by him and discounted by informed sources in Rome. Young Mussolini told reporters on arrival here that he planned to leave immediately for Washington, but hours later no arrangements had been made for the trip nor for calls he planned to make on Government officials there.

D. C. Salesman Held in Fairfax Arson Inquiry

R. A. Lynch Accused of Setting Fire to House Twice.

A Washington automobile salesman is being held in the Fairfax County jail on a charge of arson, Sheriff E. P. Kirby announced yesterday.

The man Ralph Alvin Lynch was arrested Tuesday night by Sheriff Kirby and County Policeman M. C. Wells. A house owned by Lynch at Weyanoke near Lincolnia was burned September 22 and since that time county police and State fire marshals have conducted an investigation.

Sheriff Kirby announced yesterday that Lynch had signed a confession Wednesday night before Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown.

According to the confession the sheriff said Lynch had attempted to set fire to his house on two occasions. He said that on September 22 Lynch had fired his house by placing rags soaked with coal oil in the joists, scattering paper on the floor and setting a pan of coal oil on the stove.

Lynch told the police his house and contents were insured for $2,000 and that his wife was sick and needed medical attention and he had been threatened with dispossession of his property because of overdue payments on the lot. Lynch now faces the charge of arson with intent to defraud an insurance company.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

In a match-point game, great differences in the score depend on what the rubber bridge player would think trivial. In rubber bridge the overtrick is either very unimportant, or merely a matter of "art for art's sake." In tournament bridge, however, an overtrick garnered on one hand may be every whit as important as a difficult slam contract made on another hand. For this reason South's play, in the hand below, is instructive as to the technique required for success in tournament bridge.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

West, mildly suspicious of North's diamond response, opened the seven of diamonds. Declarer won the trick with dummy's eight, and promptly took the club finesse. West won, and led the King of diamonds, hoping to set up at least one trick in the suit. Dummy won at once with the Ace of diamonds, and a small spade was returned. East made the mistake of playing low, and from then on never had a chance to escape the squeeze. South won with the Queen of spades and proceeded to run all of his clubs.

Declarer noted with interest that West followed to three rounds of clubs. Since he had already showed up with a six-card diamond suit, he had room for only four cards in the majors. If, as was most likely, he had started with two cards in each major suit, East was the holder of the only stopper in each of the majors. In that case South, with 11 sure tricks, could inflict a squeeze on East to obtain the twelfth trick.

Since it cost nothing to try, South proceeded with such a plan. When the last club was led South retained in his own hand a spade and three hearts to the Ace. Dummy held the King and a low heart and obliged to come down to four cards. Since he had to hold the King and a low spade to control dummy's holding in that suit, he was forced to retain only two hearts. Thereupon the King and the Ace of hearts dropped all of the outstanding cards in that suit.

Free School Lunches.

Approval by the Board of Education of the movement to provide free lunches for undernourished school children will doubtless be the signal for general community support of the undertaking. It is to be assumed that the board has satisfied itself as to the need for emergency help of this sort. The plight of 5,000 hungry children in Washington classrooms should alone be sufficient to bring forth the necessary funds.

The reduction from 8,000 to 5,000 in the estimated number of children in need of free lunches is encouraging. First, it indicates that the need for such emergency measures is diminishing. Secondly, it strongly suggests that the number may be further reduced by careful investigation of each case. Co-operation of the Board of Public Welfare in this task should be invaluable, for it already has extensive data on the relief needs of Washington families.

It is well to recognize, too, the emergency character of this civic undertaking. Primarily, of course, the function of the schools is to educate children and not to feed them. In cases of need the latter obligation can be more effectively handled through the Board of Public Welfare. For undernourishment is a family problem. There is no good reason for discrimination in favor of the child who goes to school as contrasted with those not old enough to get a free lunch and education together.

In attempting to deal with undernourishment on a permanent basis, therefore, it should be attacked at its source. Clearly the problem is one of providing adequate relief in necessitous homes. Since the funds to be raised for school lunches may cut into receipts by the Community Chest, which is grappling with more general aspects of relief, the desirability of merging this movement with a wider community welfare program becomes obvious.

With plans to serve lunches at the schools already under way, a more rational approach to this vital problem may have to wait until next year. In the meantime it may be assumed that precautions will be taken to save children obtaining free lunches at school from any embarrassment. And if the Citizens' Emergency Committee decides to initiate plans for consolidation of its activities with those of our permanent relief agencies, it will render a double service.

A Tragic Loss.

Loss of the domestic partner always seems more tragic when it is suffered by one who is already burdened with heavy public responsibilities. In a very real sense, therefore, Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, will have the sympathy of the entire country in his present bereavement.

The tragic circumstances under which the wife of Secretary Ickes was killed more than two years ago are still vivid in the memory of Washingtonians. Mrs. Hopkins' losing fight against death at a comparatively early age is no less a cause of sorrow in both official and unofficial circles.

Many citizens who have watched Mr. Hopkins grapple with the relief problem during the last year did not realize that he was also burdened by the shadow of an approaching tragedy in his own home. His always conscientious devotion to his work, despite this strain, serves now to accentuate the sympathy which is all that can be offered in condolence.

A Warning To The C. I. O.

The re-election of Premier Hepburn and his Liberal government in Ontario ordinarily would not arouse much interest on this side of the border, especially in the ranks of labor. This time, however, the results of the provincial election have a special significance for us.

Mr. Hepburn sought support on the basis of his labor record. Last spring, it will be recalled, he took a militant stand against efforts of C. I. O. organizers to extend to Canada the tactics that, in his own words, had brought the United States almost to a state of anarchy.

He refused to deal with "foreign agitators," called out the mounted police and held them in readiness to suppress disturbances in the vicinity of the Canadian plant of the General Motors Corporation. Moreover, he announced that imprisonment awaited John L. Lewis or any of his C. I. O. aides if they should venture into Ontario to advocate sit-down strikes or try to prevent the return of employes to work by threats of violence. By firmness he succeeded in maintaining order, and in the final settlement the local union was compelled to disavow instructions from the C. I. O. and negotiate solely through its own representatives.

Now this official has been re-elected on his labor record. His victory should serve as a warning to C. I. O. leaders against future employment of oppressive tactics. Premier Hepburn, to be sure, is not opposed to unionization by legal methods. He is merely a foe of those illegal practices that were curbed so tardily and ineffectually in many parts of the United States.

The support accorded him, however, shows that the people of Canada are in no mood to tolerate high-handed action on the part of labor unions. The Ontario election results, following the relatively poor showing made by the C. I. O. candidate for mayor in the Detroit primary, indicates that Mr. Lewis' organization would do well to concentrate its efforts upon strengthening discipline within its own ranks and consolidating its gains, instead of reaching out for new political fields to conquer.

Opposing The Drift To War.

It was to be expected that the President's Chicago speech, and the action of the Government in branding Japan as the aggressor in the struggle now raging in the Far East, would produce a few isolationist jitters.

"We are drifting into war," asserts Senator Nye, whose pet panacea, the misnamed neutrality law, the President has properly refused to apply. And Senator Borah, who not long ago was eloquently denouncing Fascist aggression in Spain, now observes that "the only thing we could and should do is to pursue our own course and keep aloof from entanglements."

These and similar statements rest on the utterly false assumption that the alternative to inaction by the United States in the face of an extremely menacing situation is involvement in war. It is entirely because of this assumption that there seems any validity in the shameful argument that Americans should draw no distinction between a nation that is an aggressor and one that is defending its right to exist.

Actually, "positive endeavors to preserve peace," to use the President's phrase, do not foreshadow any application of military measures by the United States. No case could be made for such military action by this Nation either in the Far East or elsewhere. But that does not mean that the United States cannot, in concert with other powers, render an enormously valuable service to peace through nonmilitary efforts.

The nations which today menace the peace of the world are extremely vulnerable to financial and economic pressure. Such strength as they have thus far been able to display is very largely the product of the timidity and disunity of the peace-loving nations. Given the readines of those peace-loving nations to act co-operatively in defense of a stable world order and the spreading threat of war would disappear like mist in the sun.

So far as Japan is concerned that point was made with considerable force by former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson in his thought-provoking letter to The Post. Said he:

> In my opinion, this is not a case where there should be any thought of America sending armies to participate in a strife that is going on in Asia. Not only is such a course probably militarily impossible; not only would it be abhorrent to our people, but to attempt it would do much more harm than good.

This does not mean, Mr. Stimson made clear, that the United States can do nothing to stop the hostilities raging in China. On the contrary we can do a very great deal. Above all we can stop giving that assistance to the aggressor without which Japan could not long continue to wage its war on China.

Lacking the raw materials essential to war making—oil, cotton, iron, rubber, etc.—Japan can only secure them from abroad. The Japanese can only pay for such supplies through the sale of their own products. And, as it happens, both Japan's sources of supply and its valuable markets are limited to a very small number of nations, of which the United States and the British Empire are far and away the most important.

As Mr. Stimson points out:

> In Japan's present tottering financial condition she is able to make these purchases of raw material for her guns and ammunition only by selling enough of her own products to obtain the requisite foreign exchange to pay for her purchases.

Insofar as these products are bought by the United States we are today participating in the Japanese conquest of China, a land with which our relations have been of the friendliest from the very beginning of our national history. Obviously it is the very negation of common sense to continue as the tacit ally of a nation which is proceeding deliberately to undermine all the constructive work which American diplomats, missionaries, educators and traders have laboriously accomplished in the Far East.

But, some will say, any application of economic pressure against Japan would also injure our interests by depriving Americans interested in the Japan trade of their livelihood.

That is true. But already Japan, by barring the import of more than 100 commodities not absolutely needed by her military machine, has gone far to destroy the validity of that argument. It becomes increasingly apparent that the temporary application of co-operative economic pressure to Japan would be a much less expensive procedure than the ultimate cost to us of a continued trend toward international anarchy.

The Means And The End.

No informed person is likely to question President Roosevelt's statement that a majority of the people in the Western States he has recently visited are in accord with his general objectives. Indeed, it is obvious that a large majority in the entire country approves the broad purpose of the New Deal. That was clearly demonstrated a year ago, and there is no indication that the public attitude has been reversed.

As a result of his continued popularity, the President seems to have concluded that the people are not much concerned about methods, but have an intense interest in objectives. As usual his observation has been keen. If public opinion in the West had been seriously disturbed by the Administration's now defunct judiciary program, the President would not have received the enthusiastic applause that greeted him everywhere.

There seems to be no doubt that the West is more interested in cheap electricity, irrigation projects, and new Federal enterprises of various kinds than in any expression of open resentment over the assault upon the courts. That is not strange. The rank and file are always most interested in those policies which intimately and obviously affect their welfare. More complicated issues, such as executive encroachment upon the courts, make a universal appeal only when the consequences of such unwise policy are actually felt by the people.

It is the President's own reaction to this finding that must be sharply challenged. Since the people are more interested in objectives than in the means of achieving them, the President apparently assumes that the method of approach is of little importance. In a constitutional democracy that is not only an unfortunate but also a dangerous attitude.

Hitler's aim is undoubtedly improvement of the economic welfare of the German people. The same may be said of the dictatorial regimes in Russia and Italy, perhaps even of Japan. But the means being used to attain those objectives seem reprehensible to virtually every American. And is precisely the tendency to ignore methods of approach in favor of fancied short cuts to ultimate objectives which characterizes totalitarian rule.

The fact that the rank and file are opportunistic enough to subordinate means to ends merely enhances the responsibility of the Administration to cling tenaciously to democratic tradition and procedure. From the practical viewpoint, it is impossible for the electorate to initiate legislation or devise machinery to effectuate its will. That task must be entrusted to elected officials. And, of course, it is their obligation to choose only those means and methods which fit in with the spirit and letter of the basic law.

The President would make a very serious mistake if he should interpret the continued approval of his rather vague objectives as carte blanche to revive measures found to be unconstitutional. Short cuts to more extensive Federal power are not the less dangerous because they may reflect policies indorsed by powerful groups. To be truly constructive, such measures must be satisfactory both as to means and end.

When the President returns to Washington to confer with his advisers on calling a special session of Congress, the importance of methods of approach ought to become a vital part of the discussion. Mr. Roosevelt should be even more eager than Congress to avoid another protracted fight over fundamentals of our democratic system.

May The Best Woman Win!

Vienna, the traditional city of romance and romances, is in a bad way. And there's absolutely nothing that Dan Cupid or Mary Haworth can do about it. For the trouble is not a lack of arrows and advice, but a decided dearth of eligible men. To be exact, there are 65,000 more Viennese women of marriageable age than there are men in that category. Statistically, the ratio is 121 females to every 100 males.

Viennese butchers, bakers and candlestick makers may not be disheartened by the bumper crop of bachelor maids. But think of the headache these figures must give to florists and jewelers. In Vienna, at least, the books of Marjorie Hillis should far outsell those of Emily Post. For it's not a question of which is proper to accept—a kiss on the wrist or a diamond bracelet. It's more a matter of philosophizing on the absence of such tributes and of learning how orchids may be grown on one's own budget.

If it is true that misery loves company, the feminine population of Vienna may find consolation in the fact that Washington shares its problem. In the District of Columbia there are only 90 males for every 100 females. As one capital city to another it behooves us to extend our sympathy, without saying to which sex we send the condolences.

It isn't so much that the reformer hates sin as it is that he envies a spirit of happy-go-luckiness.

Becoming wiser today isn't altogether an unmixed blessing. It causes you to realize what a fool you were yesterday.

There seem to be two major problems in writing a novel: (a) getting the story started and (b) getting it stopped.

Mrs. Lockwood's Vote.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post prints some queer things. One of the queerest is the statement in this morning's issue that in 1884 Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood, a candidate for President, "received the entire electoral vote of Indiana (and) one-half the electoral vote of Oregon."

The total number of electoral votes in 1884 was 401. Cleveland and Hendricks received 219 votes, and Blaine and Logan received 182. Mrs. Lockwood received no electoral votes, and her popular vote was so small that in most cases it was not even recorded. It would be pleasant to speculate on just how she could have received "one-half of the electoral vote of Oregon." The share of Oregon in the Electoral College of 1884 was three votes.

W. J. GHENT.

Washington, Oct. 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In re certain statements contained in my article on Belva Ann Lockwood published on Sunday last in your good paper I am pleased to submit herewith supporting evidence on said statements.

In a petition introduced in the Senate in January, 1884, by Senator Hoar in behalf of Belva Ann Lockwood, and following that portion of said petition which gives the number of popular votes received by the petitioner in the States of New Hampshire, New York, Michigan, Illinois, Maryland, and California, I quote as follows: "and the entire electoral vote of Indiana." Then follows this paragraph in said petition:

"Your petitioner further states that during the recent session of the Electoral College of the State of Indiana at the capitol thereof, that after it had cast its vote for Cleveland it changed its mind, as it had an undisputed right to do, and cast its united vote for your petitioner. Your petitioner, therefore, demands that the vote of Indiana be counted for her in compliance with the expressed wish of the electors of said State, and thus your petitioner will ever pray."

It would seem entirely reasonable that a person who enjoyed high reputation in the legal profession, who was well informed on Congressional procedure, and fully cognizant of the grave charge contained in this petition would not ask for the introduction of such a petition as the foregoing if the said petition were predicated upon a groundless hypothesis.

As to the one-half electoral vote of Oregon, this statement is taken from her article in the National Magazine, March, 1903, which, in turn, is referred to in the Dictionary of American Biography, an authentic source.

Sidney Shosteck.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The death of Sidney Shosteck, of Washington, while fighting in the ranks of the republican army in Spain against the vandal invaders of fascism will bring sorrow to the many who knew him and who admired his fine qualities.

We can only hope that the supreme sacrifice given by Sid Shosteck, sincere, unselfish, impulsive young idealist, may genuinely contribute to the victory of the democratic forces that are waging so inspiring and so unequal a struggle against ruthless reaction.

Sid Shosteck's enlistment in the Spanish loyalist army was a noble act and he realized full well the risk he was taking. If democracy eventually triumphs in the land of Cervantes, it will be due in no small degree to the service and devotion of volunteers like him.

"America Finds Her Voice"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "We are a generation," said Mr. Walter Lippmann some years ago, "which has a rendezvous with destiny." He was speaking at the time of the internal problems which the democracies face, yet his words seem to be prophetic, likewise, of external problems which we must to some degree solve, or we perish.

It seems to me that the blood of those who failed to thrill at the President's Chicago speech must be as weak as their logic is faulty. For 19 years we have been running away from the realities of the world in which we live, and at long last, as the editors used to say, we have turned to face them. The President's statement that "there must be a return to a belief in the pledged word, in the value of a signed treaty" . . . "recognition of the fact that national morality is as vital as private morality" should be graven on the hearts of those who would enjoy the privileges of the richest country in the world without acknowledging her responsibilities.

The fact that the President went into no detail as to how we are to breathe life into our treaty obligations is not so important at the moment. The acknowledgment of responsibility and of willingness to co-operate are guarantees that ways can be found to bring about results. The fearfully handicapped League of Nations has already taken new heart. Sanctions are possible, or individual embargoes, or boycotts, or perhaps other means. There are various ways short of war in which a few thieving nations can be brought to terms if the overwhelming majority are determined that it shall be done.

It has been said that if Woodrow Wilson had not founded the League it would have come into existence anyway, because the times cried for it so loudly. The fact that it is weak and faulty at present matters not half so much as that it exists, that it is in some ways indispensable and that in the course of years it, or its successor, will be made workable. Some sort of international organization is surely coming which will insure some measure of safety to peace-loving peoples, and the time is not too far off.

GLADYS PAVLAT.

Colmar Manor, Md., Oct. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am deeply impressed with the expression of our President at Chicago. Some weeks ago I proposed a concerted attitude on the part of the peace-loving nations of the world, against the so-called dictators, who are making every effort to destroy the principles of democracy which will eventually stifle every fiber of freedom existent in the present day world. War is horrible and I abhor the result, remembering the conflict of 20 years ago which left its devastated mark.

I pray to God that the brave, fearless and opportune statement of the President will bear fruit in the near future, and spare further bloodshed and destruction, so that "Peace on Earth and Good Will Toward Man" might prevail throughout the world for generations to come.

ISAAC B. NORDLINGER.

Washington, Oct. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot let the day pass without paying cordial tribute to the courageous and far-seeing leadership displayed in your editorial "America Finds Her Voice." It should help to make this occasion a turning point toward a governed world.

Let the good work go on!

M. W.

Washington, Oct. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanks for your editorial on the President's Chicago speech. I wish it might have a Nation-wide broadcast as a further aid to prompt translation of his words into appropriate action, long over-due.

W. N. CAMPBELL.

Washington, Oct. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With a host of others, I join in praise of the President for his attitude to international peace built on honor and righteousness. Upstanding, self-respecting, humanity-loving men and women of our Nation will hold their heads a little higher, and their hearts will pound more proudly at reading our President's Chicago speech.

Reports tell us the President looked more grave and spoke in tones unmistakably serious when he recounted the wrongs and woes which mankind is suffering from "undeclared wars" and from subterfuges used to cover up aggrandizement. The part of our citizenry that fails to deal with a condition but prefers to face a theory only, will still cry, "Keep us out of war." But war does not necessarily mean resort to military agencies.

The tremendous moral influence of our country and the powerful commercial part it can play in behalf of the outraged and victimized of whatever nation, must not only enhearten the peoples who are struggling with monsters of modern warfare, but must serve notice to national marauders that the United States is not afraid to speak its mind and to back up speech by action.

As terrible as war is, there are things even worse. And among those should be named oblivious indifference to the wrongs which other nations are suffering from no faults of their own. "If one member suffers, all members suffer with it." The world is too closely knit in commercial, intellectual, religious and human bonds to permit any such isolation as some of our prominent people have preached and tried to commit our country to accept as a national policy.

Congratulation on your fine front-page pronouncement in today's Post.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Japan is actually a nation of "have nots," as has been pointed out, and as the "haves" are unwilling to relinquish a thing, this country is compelled to gain additional territory, if it expects to survive. Perhaps the U. S. A. had better mind its own business and not meddle in the Far East. A score of years ago, we attempted to make the world safe for democracy and managed to make it unsafe for everybody, by becoming entangled in a war that really didn't concern us.

Italy recently ravished Ethiopia, without any protest from us; Britain, not so many years ago, besmirched the Boers, and the noble Red Man was almost exterminated by the white Americans in their quest for new territory. During the Civil War, the cities of Richmond and Atlanta were burned to the ground, although the South at that time was on its back starving; barns were burned, grain destroyed and aristocratic mansions pillaged by invading armies. During the World War, a score of so-called Christian nations indulged in the greatest mass slaughter in history.

"War is hell" as Sherman averred, and it is not apt to be legislated away by treaties or threats. Yours truly, "HARD BOILED FACTS."

The Rockville Charges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read your editorial of October 4, "Scandal in Rockville," with a great deal of surprise. Will you allow me to give you the facts as they are seen by a taxpayer with no ax to grind?

As a life-long resident and taxpayer who knows Montgomery County and every official in it, let me say you were correct when you spoke of the corruption in the county, but failed to state that because of this and other conditions, the people arose and turned out the gang responsible for such conditions.

While I am not a Fusionist, I have greatest admiration and respect for the chairman of the County Commissioners, Mr. Karn, and Mr. Charles King, because I know both are honest and sincere men, and when their own Fusion appointees have been at fault they have not hesitated to dismiss them and get full restitution.

We taxpayers know the election is coming on and we are not fooled by political maneuvers. We like your paper, we believe you want to know the truth that you can impart same in an unbiased manner, for it is we taxpayers who support you and will continue to do so as long as you give us the service we feel we merit and deserve.

Personality.

WHENEVER I hear or read people discoursing on personality, what it is and how to build it, I am likely to think of two things—one and maybe both: Sam Houston and the autogyro.

There was a time when everyone acquainted with Sam Houston knew as well what his personality was as he did himself. He was not shiftless; he was inert. He was not slipping; he had hit bottom. He had fallen out of hitch with the civilization in which he lived and had just sort of quit, laid down, and called it a day. Seeing this kind of thing didn't go down with his own folks he gravitated to a soft spot among the Creeks—or maybe it was the Cherokees—and holed up, apparently for the rest of what might laughingly have been called his lifetime.

Life must have been middling easy among those long-suffering people, at the time. They had known him, Sam Houston, when he was sensible and energetic, and had gotten along with him. They put up with him uncomplainingly now, when obviously he had caved.

Sometimes he lay low in his lodge because he felt no interest in motion, and at other times he was laid low in his lodge by the liquor he consumed when he got restless enough to amble out and stir around. Between times his adopted tribe fed him and saw that he didn't catch cold. After sizing him up and weighing one thing against another they decided on a handy name for him. The Indian form of it escapes me, but accurately translated it read: "Big Drunk." The tribe liked him and did not lie.

It was some years later that Gen. Houston ordered the bridges of retreat destroyed at San Jacinto and led his army to a victory that established Texas as an independent republic under the lone-starred flag. And it was years later that Gov. Houston unyieldingly retired after refusing to consent to the secession of the State of Texas from the Federal Union. And sooner or later a college town in the State was named for him.

But probably plenty of people who knew him and understood him, and liked him in their fashion, in the days when he had let go of things, remembered him when they idly combed their recollections for something to make conversation about, as Big Drunk. He had been hard to put up with, and sometimes they wondered what had become of him, and once in a while it seemed to them they felt sorry he had gone wrong.

The autogyro idea is a little far-fetched, but still there is something in it, it seems to me, that is illustrative of the personality theme. When an autogyro stands parked in the mud on a drear field, with its rotor blades drooping from its universal-joint mounting on that pole upthrust from the fuselage, and with its tail dragging in the soup, one who glances in passing at its blank, lifeless dial eyes cannot say that it is other than a played-out iron mule, about as purposeful and efficient as the working model of a threshing machine that couldn't do anything but thresh around and smoke up the atmosphere—the fatal bad dream of a village nitwit.

But fuel the autogyro and get the rotor blades whirling in the slipstream, take off the brakes, and let the thing ramble forward and rise—then the aspect is different. The formerly dead eyes of the instrument board snap into sudden significance, the formerly dragging tail determines direction, and the formerly abject ass's ears of the rotor, now on the whirl, actually deceive the universe into regarding them as an airworthy plane, when the motor carries the craft forward, and as an airworthy parachute when the motor stops.

The difference between Sam Houston's second aspect, and the autogyro's, and their first, derives from their getting into action in an element favorable to them. One doesn't doubt that Houston knew, when he was bogged among the Indians, that he was a sorry, sodden barnyard fowl, waiting without interest for death; nor does one doubt that he felt the assurance of an eagle when Texas had revolted and he had spread his wings. Were an autogyro sentient and conscious it would feel like that, too.

What Price Slimness?

The sudden death of a New York heiress, tentatively attributed to an overdose of reducing pills, should be a warning to the many American women tempted to seek sylph-like proportions without competent medical advice. The recent and still current craze for slimness, in the opinion of many doctors, is responsible for physical and mental ailments that afflict thousands of American women.

Excess weight that results from overeating and lack of exercise often can be disposed of by a more moderate diet and the taking of regular exercises. The trouble is that many women are too indolent to exercise themselves and too fond of rich food to cut down their eating of calory-laden items. As a result, they sometimes try to reduce by taking drugs dangerous to the heart.

Certainly no reducing medicine should be taken by anyone except on professional advice. Caution is especially needed in cases in which overweight results from glandular causes. Those who profit from the reducing racket do not pay the funeral costs of their victims. It is far better to remain a living fat person than to become a thin corpse.

"Little Flower."

THIS IS A FUNNY mayoralty campaign that we are having in New York.

Jerry Mahoney is running against Fiorello LaGuardia, the best mayor the greater city has ever had. Maybe it would be more prudent to say that the Little Flower is "one of the greatest mayors" in the city's history, but that would be holding out on him as the Sultan did the time he decorated the wife of the British diplomat with the Order of Chastity, Second Class.

The Little Flower has been a swell mayor, the better, of course, by contrast with Jimmy Walker and his successor, John O'Brien, who said, when the reporters asked him whom he was going to name police commissioner, "I don't know; they haven't told me yet."

John was honest, anyway. The boys up at Tammany Hall were going to name the police commissioner, and he knew that everyone knew it and was too innocent to pretend otherwise.

John is now retired on a pension of about $12,000 a year, payable to Mrs. O'Brien, too, as long as she lives, should she survive him, and, but for the terrible squawk of indignation, recently, Jimmy Walker, too, would have been eligible for a similar pension on similar terms.

• • • •

THE WALKER THING came along just in time to remind the citizens of the Walker administration in all its picturesque details and of the Tammany tinbox mess which preceded LaGuardia. The uproar revived the whole business for several weeks and, as it turned out, the attempt to take care of Jimmy was all water on LaGuardia's wheel. The boys found themselves actually making a campaign for the man they wanted to lick and all for the sake of a $12,000 pension for one indivdual who had small claim on their gratitude at that.

It was reported that, in gratitude for his readmittance to that which, in his case, may be laughingly referred to as the public service, Jimmy would go out and do some campaigning for Jerry Mahoney. But very soon, in view of the reaction to his appointment to a job, it became apparent that any speeches by him would be more a burden than a help to Jerry. Since then they have been unloading Mr. Walker.

On good authority from Washington it has been reported that Jim Farley had nothing to do with his appointment, and only a few nights ago Quent Reynolds, the sport writer, who is Jerry Mahoney's nephew, telephoned your correspondent to say, "Hey, lay off my Uncle Jerry on that Walker thing. Uncle Jerry is for good government."

"Without fear or favor?" your correspondent asked.

"One hundred per cent, absolutely," Mr. Reynolds said.

UNCLE JERRY WAS a distinguished athlete in his day, but as a politician and statesman in American athletic affairs he erred seriously last year when he opposed American participation in the Nazi Olympics. His motives were good, but if his motion had carried Adolf Hitler would have been spared the humiliation of fleeing from his Caesar's throne every time an American Negro won an event.

Hitler refused to admit that any colored boy could defeat any Aryan and, in order to avoid the necessity of congratulating colored winners on the American team, he engaged in more sprints than all his Aryan athletes combined, ducking up the aisle to a hiding place. It was good for his wind, perhaps, but bad for his prestige with the sportsmen of the world, not that he had any to speak of except in the crazy countries.

Up to now, Jerry has had no more to say against the Little Flower than that he is sympathetic with the Communists, but the Little Flower can point to the time when he rushed a gang of Communists out of the City Hall, in person, for exploiting the sufferings of the poor whom he was trying to help.

If only some one could get a cop indicted for accepting a free cigar that might give Jerry a police scandal to work on, but there just isn't anything so far, and the poor guy is trying to do an act without material.

As for the Little Flower, he is doing all right. And for dirt, with the Walker thing refreshed in the public mind, all he needs is one word, "Tammany."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Endeavour I.

("The Endeavour I, cut adrift at sea in a storm, made Gosport, England, under her own sail."—News item.)

She seemed a slouch in gentle winds—
She didn't look so much
When racing for a silver cup
And fame's illusive touch;
The experts said she was a joke,
A misfit and a dud,
But out where good ships meet a test,
It seems that she could scud!

Regattas weren't quite her style,
She didn't find her stride
In water carnivals where boats
So decorated ride;
Where snow-white playthings of the rich
Were gathered for a show
She wasn't much, but she was hot
Out in the blackest blow.

She didn't seem to be an ace
Of racing yachts at all,
And seemed to go reluctantly
To race committees' call;
A sluggish and unlucky thing,
No pep or grit she had—
Until she had to fight for life—
And then she wasn't bad!

Off Judith and old Newport's cliffs
She wasn't such a bet,
And acted like a lady who
Just hated getting wet;
She had to take the jibes and slurs
And hear the jokesters jest—
But now hers is the last laugh, for
She met the tougher test.

Well tailored and all set for games,
She hardly showed a thing;
Where fleets met for a holiday,
Of her we couldn't sing;
She seemed a rather ill-starred ship
Whenever she set sail . . .
Until she met the challenge of
The thunder and the gale.

L'envoi.

She had to trail a Yankee sloop,
As did her younger born;
She knew as did the other one
The bitter taste of scorn;
But that's all out and old stuff now,
And she shall live and rate
In song and story of the sea

United States And Great Britain, As Stimson Points Out, Are Providing Japan With Sinews Of War.

By Felix Morley.

IF THEY HAD been designed to supplement each other, which they were not, there could scarcely have been a closer accord between the speech of President Roosevelt at Chicago on Tuesday and the letter of former Secretary Stimson as printed in The Post yesterday. Taken together these two momentous documents beautifully illustrate the continuity which characterizes American foreign policy. They demonstrate the fact that in the handling of the Far Eastern crisis there is no question of domestic politics, and no likelihood that the Administration's course will anywhere be viewed or criticized from a partisan viewpoint.

In his Chicago speech the President emphasized the future. "Let no one imagine," he said, "that America will escape, that it may expect mercy, that this Western Hemisphere will not be attacked" if this country fails to make "positive endeavors" to check the rising tide of aggression. And such endeavors, Mr. Roosevelt pointed out, must take the form of a "concerted effort to uphold laws and principles on which alone peace can rest secure."

Using the historical approach Mr. Stimson arrived at an identical conclusion. But dangers ahead were also much in the mind of President Hoover's Secretary of State. Japan's ruthless efforts to subjugate China, he says, creates "grave possible threats and disturbances to us."

A large part of the Stimson statement, however, was concerned with the evolution of the traditional American policy in the Far East. For over a generation, regardless of who was in the White House, this has been directed to preserving the territorial and administrative integrity of China, now menaced as never before.

Both statesmen, therefore, agree that the United States cannot possibly be indifferent to the present Japanese aggression, and cannot even pretend to favor a spurious neutrality which would be at variance with our solemn treaty obligations and with the whole direction of our Far Eastern policy since the days of John Hay. Both men agree further that the only way in which the United States can effectively fulfill its obligations is by effective co-operation with other peace-loving powers which have in the past followed our leadership in the Far East and whose fundamental interests are now threatened in much the same way as are our own.

How To Restrain Japan Is Unsolved Problem.

BOTH THE background and the objectives of our national policy in this crisis are thus clearly posed. The unsolved problem is how to restrain Japan, and restore peace in the Far East, with a maximum effectiveness and a minimum risk of aggravating the hostilities there. This is no easy task, requiring international as well as national solidarity for its effective accomplishment. But the obvious line of solution has now been sketched out, in a general way by the President, more concretely by Mr. Stimson.

Japan, as Mr. Stimson emphasizes, gets nearly all her basic war munitions from the United States and Great Britain. She does not need to buy, and does not buy in any quantities, the actual airplanes, bombs and shells now being used by her troops to terrorize the Chinese people into submission. But the oil and iron, the rubber, cotton and wool which are the real munitions of modern warfare reach Japan either from this country or from British possessions. If that flow could be interrupted for only a few months Japanese troops would be forced to evacuate Chinese soil.

A joint Anglo-American embargo on these shipments would begin to terminate the war in China the day it was applied. It would immediately reverse the trend toward ever-spreading hostilities and it would do so without any risk of involving either the United States or Great Britain in war. Not a warship and not a soldier is necessary to make effective a simple decision not to sell to a treaty violator the materials essential to making his violation successful.

Such a course would be an honest and real neutrality. For, as Mr. Stimson says, "the odds against which they (the Chinese) are fighting are being made possible by us."

The former Secretary of State makes a further practical suggestion. Japan now can buy her essential munitions only by getting dollars and pounds through sales of her products to this country and Great Britain. Her most important export is raw silk, of which this country buys some 80 per cent of what Japan sends overseas, the British taking nearly all the rest.

Neutrality Law Aids Aggressor

IN A VERY REAL sense the silk stockings, dresses and underwear worn by American women are serving to provide the bombs with which Japanese aviators are today blasting Chinese women and children. An effective boycott of silk products would, Mr. Stimson suggests, soon operate to save the lives of thousands of Chinese noncombatants who otherwise seem doomed by the calculated Japanese campaign of terror.

The American people are strongly opposed to war and strongly in favor of any form of neutrality which is worthy of the name. Present confusion on the subject arises from the fact that the neutrality legislation now on the statute books has nothing to do with real neutrality. If invoked, it would merely assist the aggressor to destroy his victim, thereby encouraging other potential aggressors to follow the same course until what the President calls "the epidemic of world lawlessness" spreads to the New World. That, as Mr. Stimson says, is not neutrality at all. "It will not save us from entanglement. It will even make entanglement more certain."

From any realistic viewpoint the policy on which the President and Mr. Stimson join hands is far more worthy of the honorable name of neutrality. Instead of encouraging war, it seeks to discourage hostilities. Instead of assisting an aggressor, it seeks peacefully to deprive international banditry of the sinews of violence. Instead of extending tacit approval to the violation of treaties, it seeks to penalize the lawbreaker, though merely to the extent of refusing to recognize his title to stolen goods. It is the policy of the Good Neighbor, since one who assists rapine, murder and theft can never deserve that title.

But, to be effective, this real Good Neighbor policy, as the President points out, must be co-operative. It must be carried out jointly with other countries whose standard of international morality is similar to our own. Just so the citizen, in order to be a good neighbor, must co-operate with those whose civic interests are fundamentally the same. None can be a good neighbor by crawling under the bed, as Senator Nye would have us do. "There is no escape," in the words of Mr. Roosevelt, "through mere isolation" of the ostrich type.

Can We Learn From Past Experience?

TO REALIZE this, however, is not to discover automatically the successful formula for co-operative action. This effort has been tentatively made in the past and has been unsuccessful. But to say that this has doomed the whole technique is absurd. It would be tantamount to claiming that the Wright brothers showed flying to be impractical because they were only able to stay aloft a few minutes at Kittyhawk. The important event then was that these men of faith were able to fly at all.

From the first clumsy attempts in aviation came the improvements which before long made transatlantic flights possible. From the first clumsy essays in "concerted effort to uphold laws and principles" essential for peace may equally well be developed a peace system worthy of the name. All that is necessary is the will to establish such a system.

The first necessity, in demonstrating that will, is a truce to recriminations over earlier failures. It is common argument here that the effort for a united front failed in 1932 because the British would not support us. It is common argument in Great Britain that this effort failed because we did not support Geneva at the psychological moment. Which of these assertions is the more true, and why, is today a matter on which argument can serve no useful purpose.

The issue of vital importance is whether current statesmanship will be able to learn from experience, as did the pioneers in aviation, and thereby avoid the blunders which have heretofore made trials of collective action unsuccessful.

While the problem is not easy the need for its solution is imperative. And the fact that this need is now apparent to every mother of a child, to every father of a family, to every responsible citizen, will greatly help in finding the way. For the only alternative, as the shattered ruins of Shanghai and Madrid visibly attest, is a future too terrible for sane men to contemplate.

Whole Show

"South By Thunderbird"

THE DEVELOPMENT of safe and comfortable air transportation around South America has opened up another portion of the world for the American traveler. Hudson Strode, after producing two excellent books on Cuba and the Bermudas, has turned his attention to the pleasures and experiences of a flight around the southern continent. He flew from Miami over Cuba and on through Mexico and Central America as an appetizer for the real trip which began in Panama.

The author's purpose in circling South America was "to get a bird's-eye view of the whole show." He states that he went not as "an archeologist, a salesman, an engineer, a diplomat, an ornithologist, or a propagandist." Rather he traveled southward as "an eager observer," and he returned with a graphic picture of South America from the air and on the ground and an interesting story of how its people act and think in the city and in the country, at the dinner table, at the theater, on the street, at the clubs, and at the racetracks.

THE READER IS introduced to Colombia with a description of Turbo, a place "like the heart of Africa." Medellin, a town with a perfect climate, comes next and then Bogota, situated a mile and a half above the sea and practically isolated from the world until the advent of the airplane. That gray, austere, and aristocratic city seemed "a somber sketch in charcoal," and was soon abandoned for the country estates around Medellin.

Ecuador presented Panama hats, Indians, tales of shrunken human heads, veneration for Bolivar and Sucre, tagua nuts, and the volcano, Chimborazo. The most interesting thing about Ecuador for Washingtonians is the description of the cost of living in Guayaquil: "I live like a prince . . . superior Italian cooking . . . dinner and luncheon . . . $9.50 a month . . . breakfast . . . $1.50 a month . . . Five of us bachelors live in an apartment with a terrace in the tallest apartment house in Guayaquil. A penthouse for $20 a month—$4 apiece. Our house boy—perfectly trained: butler, valet, everything—costs $3 a month."

PERU IS THE background of a vanished civilization, the land of Inca ruins, and the haunt of the spirits of Pizarro and Atahualpa. Its reactionary aristocracy "owes its wealth and position to the operations of seabirds' bowels"—the guano deposits of the coastal islands. Peruvian women are unemancipated, as are most of the women of Latin America, and describe their men as "Moors to the hilt."

Chile, the sword-shaped republic stretching from Peru to Cape Horn, is a nation of the present. The World War ruined its nitrate monopoly, but it is making a phenomenal comeback from the economic depths. It produces two-thirds of all South American minerals and metals, but these are primarily in the hands of Americans. The Chileans labor and look to the future; they are the "Yankees of South America."

Argentina is "wedge-shaped like a plowshare" and derives its wealth from the fertility of its soil. Barbed wire has replaced its gaucho, as it spelled the doom of the American cowboy. Wheat and beef are its products, its capital and markets are English, and its sentiments are pro-British. Buenos Aires presented everything of the modern city, but not contentment.

URUGUAY WAS FOUND to be the "self-set-up laboratory of social legislations among the nations" of Latin America. It was the first country of South America to separate the church and state, to legalize divorce, to permit women to vote, to abolish capital punishment, and to establish a minimum wage law, an 8-hour day, and pensions for the aged.

Brazil is the largest country in the New World and ranks second only to the United States in population. Rio de Janeiro is its fantastic capital, and its people are Portuguese leavened with Negroes, Indians, Germans, and Italians. Brazilian resources are so great that ardent boosters assert that "God is a Brazilian." Brazil has lost its rubber trade, but its coffee, diamonds, and sugar go to all parts of the world. Increased cotton production has caused apprehension in the United States, and Southern planters are emigrating to Brazil even as their predecessors did after 1865.

The casual reader will find much of interest in Hudson Strode's "South by Thunderbird," the prospective South American traveler will find much of profit in its pages, and the historian of the future will find it useful for his footnotes.

"SOUTH BY THUNDERBIRD," by Hudson Strode. (Random House, $3.)

LITERARY DISCOVERIES as dramatic as any of O. Henry's tales have been forthcoming from the State of Texas recently . . . Mary Harrell, intent on obtaining material to get credits for her master's degree, recently stumbled on certain sketches in the Houston Post for 1895 and 1896 bearing the unmistakable prose style of O. Henry . . . Some were signed "W. S. P.," and one "W. S. Porter," probably the only story ever written under his real name . . . The widow of O. Henry has given her consent to their publication and Doubleday, Doran is bringing them out in January under the title of "O. Henry Encore" . . . Miss Harrell is credited with their editing and discovery . . . All these tidbits just serve to egg me on in my search for a Button Gwinnett . . . And Lawrence of Arabia's lost manuscript . . . And 52 sonnets which George Cronyn wrote when he was a lovesick student at Harvard . . . Like Lawrence, he left them in a railroad station and they've never been seen since . . . .

Most Thrilling Routine Is Night Before The Game

THEY CALL it routine at the Naval Academy, but to the spectator it's some of the most thrilling routine in the world—the night before a football game.

I entered the Academy grounds just before 7 in the evening. Lights and laughter filtered from the great square windows of Bancroft Hall. The mist from the Severn gave a hazy halo to the lamps along the walks. And the babble of young voices drifted from the building into the quiet night.

TOM McCARTHY.

Suddenly some place within the 3-mile maze of gleaming corridors a bugle sounded. The hallways came alive. Midshipmen poured from their rooms and raced up and down stairways, which Navy jargon designated as "ladders."

Orders lashed out. Ranks stiffened before the cry of "Right-Dress!" "Ten-Shun!" You could hear that cry of "Right-Dress" "Ten-Shun" echoing from a dozen corridors and growing fainter in distance.

The formation is a nightly routine at the Naval Academy, but there was a particular snap to it that night—the eve of a football game. The Plebes knew that they wouldn't have to sit precisely on the edges of their chairs. Upper-class men were possibly mellowed by the thought of the approaching game which they would watch in company with their "drags."

FOR THE visitor the evening meal at the Naval Academy is a sight not soon to be forgotten. Midshipmen, 2,200 strong, are seated in a long, gleaming, tunnel-like room below ground. A few moments after the last chair has been pulled into place, 100 colored enlisted men, burst through the doors laden with steaming platters of meat and vegetables.

These white-clad, colored men, assigned to the Academy, live in an old ship anchored in the Santee Basin, the name long since forgotten. The colored sailors have rechristened it the "Good Ship—She Don't Never Move."

But if their ship "Don't Never Move," the colored boys really do, and with magician speed, an evening meal is served, and dispatched in less than half an hour.

The tables, arranged with an apportionment from all four classes, became miniature cheering sections. At the far end of the gleaming room, with its two long rows of tables, a group of Midshipmen lead off with an impromptu yell for the team.

Rising, they accompanied their yell, by waving white napkins overhead. As the last "Rah—Team" echoed down the mess-hall, they dropped into place and those at the next table popped to their feet, napkins whirling, voices straining.

Down one side of the long white room, and up the other the cheer rolled along like a blue wave crested with foam, as 2,200 Midshipmen rose, table by table, whirled their napkins, shouted out their yell, and suddenly fell back into place.

Down in Macdonough Hall I saw another side of the pre-game feeling at Navy. The great arched door was shrouded in darkness, but at the far end, past the gymnasium and the world's largest swimming pool, a light gleamed from Misery Hall.

Misery Hall is the particular domain of "Doc" Snyder who has been repairing the Navy's damaged athletes for more than a quarter of a century. "Doc" Snyder wouldn't know what to do with himself if he were held down to a 10 or a 12-hour day, and true to form, he was working overtime.

As I came in the "Doc" looked up. He was a spare little man, with a soft voice, kindly eyes, and a wisp of white hair.

"I've just been putting the finishing touches on this," "Doc" told me, holding up a knee brace.

"That sure looks as if it took a lot of work," I told him. "Who do you get to sew the leather, and do the metal work?"

"Why, I do it myself," "Doc" told me. "That's the one way of making sure it'll be done right."

"It's a funny thing," Doc said, holding the knee brace up for my examination, "but I think we have more trouble with leg injuries in football than we had in the old days.

"Maybe I'm wrong, but all this riding around in automobiles seems to do something to the legs. I don't think we had half this trouble back in the days, when you walked if you wanted to get somewhere."

"Doc" has been the trainer of Navy teams for 27 years. And "untiring devotion" is a small phrase for the what the "Doc" has put into the training of Navy athletes.

I asked the "Doc" to tell me something about the Navy immortals he had trained, and I asked him what kind of boys they were.

"Doc" didn't say anything for a while.

"What sort of boys were they?" His voice seemed to choke up a bit. "What sort of boys were Jack Dalton, Clyde King," he said.

The "Doc" sort of paused and shook his head. He cleared his throat, and tried again. I don't believe he ever did get around to telling me that they were the grandest boys that ever drew on a football shoe.

But there was a little mist on his glasses which said all of that.

Hamilton Declares G.O.P. Always Will Be 'a Necessity'

New London, Conn., Oct. 6 (AP).—Republican National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton told party leaders of Connecticut and Rhode Island today that a strong Republican party will always be a necessity regardless of what political developments may come in the United States.

Although the conference was devoted chiefly to a discussion of party finances and administration, Hamilton told interviewers much interest was displayed in conjectures of a coalition with anti-New Deal Democrats and the proposal for a mid-term Republican convention before the 1938 congressional elections.

Check on Result Of Jobless Census To Be Conducted

A check of the unemployment census by taking "a fair cross-section" of the Nation "the day we have concluded our registration" is planned by John D. Biggers, administrator of the census, Biggers said yesterday in an address at the National Press Club.

Biggers said: "We will announce places . . . where an enumeratiye check will be conducted through the best possible agency, and we are considering several." The enumerative check, he added, will cover 300,000 families, or 1 per cent of the total, and enable the public to "draw its own conclusions" as to accuracy of the voluntary registration.

Biggers also explained he had become convinced that the voluntary registration method, in view of Federal budgetary requirements and the shortness of time before the 1940 decennial census, is inevitable.

Engineer Assails Vast Public Works

Boston, Oct. 7 (AP).—Henry Earle Riggs, new president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, told the society's annual meeting today engineers would fail in their duty if they "did not advise the people of the United States as to the economic soundness of proposals to spend vast sums on public works."

Riggs declared he was "decidedly pessimistic" concerning the outcome of such projects as the Passamaquoddy tidal power program in Maine, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Columbia River dams.

U. S. Plane Makers Behind on Orders

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—A world feverishly rearming, plus wars on two continents, have helped deposit on the books of American aircraft manufacturers unfilled orders totaling $135,000,000.

The backlog, symptomatic of a shortage of skilled craftsmen, was announced today by a group of manufacturers who have established a school on the West Coast to train men for their own needs.

Fish Says Roosevelt Speaks for Minority

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the House Committee on Foreign Relations, said today that when President Roosevelt "proposes to quarantine nations like Japan, Germany and Italy, or join in sanctions, he ceases to speak for the vast majority of Americans who have definitely made up their minds not to fight other people's battles."

Accusing the President of trying "to divert the minds of the people from the Supreme Court and the Black appointment," Fish said the only way to keep out of war is "to enforce the neutrality act and mind our own business instead of meddling in ancient foreign blood feuds."

Three Miners Quit Sit-Down in Shaft

Lansford, Pa., Oct. 7 (AP).—Their ranks depleted by illness, 40 hard-coal miners ended the third day of a sit-down strike today deep in the recesses of the Coaldale Colliery.

Radio License Appeal Hangs on Farm Bedtime

By the Associated Press.

The time farmers go to bed became an issue yesterday before the communications commission.

William Avera Wynne, operator of Radio Station WEED, Rocky Mount, N. C., disputed a contention the average farmer is in bed by 8 p. m. Admitting he is not an expert on the subject, Wynne said he believed the bedtime hour was much later.

Ickes Heads Trio Chosen to Select U.S. 'Star Farmer'

"Three well-known, outstanding and busy" Americans, the Interior Department announced yesterday, will meet here today to choose the "Star American Farmer" from among 343,000 farm youths.

Two of them are private citizens. The third, who represents the Federal Government, is Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who was born on a farm near Hollidaysburg, Pa., and lived there until the age of 18. Gardening is one of his major hobbies, he recently bought a farm at Olney, Md., and has originated a number of varieties of dahlias, the department said.

The other members of the committee, which will make public its selection when the Future Farmers of America meet in Kansas City October 17 to 22, are Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the National Education Association, and Philip S. Rose, editor in chief of Country Gentleman Magazine.

The Washington Post

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Over a highball at Washington's Chevy Chase Club the choleric old gentleman was waxing eloquent and bellicose.

"Why!" he cried, "Hugo Black isn't as good a lawyer as Corcoran or Cohen—or even Attorney General Homer Cummings!"

At one indoor sport Constance Cummings holds a world's record—she can look at a man more as if she really loved him than any other actress . . . Some of us who acquired our biggest layer of culture in college by reading "Madame Bovary" are a little shocked by the handling of some of the more important scenes in the play at the National.

• • • • •

Most of the diplomatic mansions in the Capital may be identified only by the "no-parking" signs in front of them, which proclaim the name of the embassy or legation . . . And the tourists can't understand why each embassy doesn't have a souvenir and refreshment stand in front, offering the national refreshments and souvenirs.

"—embassy's pop stands"

Nowhere in the Republic can American history be studied so painlessly as at the Smithsonian Museum . . . One glimpse of the little goldring which an American officer gave the captain of his ship, as he climbed over the side in the dark Mediterranean night to attack the Barbary pirates, brings back more of that fabulous war than a dozen statues of Decatur.

• • • • •

He died that night, that young officer without his gold band ring . . . Apparently he had, as he slipped the band off his finger, a premonition he was to die, at a cutlass rendezvous with the swarthy North African corsairs . . . But his little gold ring still kindles a flame in thousands of young Americans who lean over the glass case . . .

Kindles what—patriotism, militance, pacificism, compassion?

• • • •

What if every Washingtonian contributed the amount of one winter's liquor bill to feed the school tots? They'd probably all get fat and sassy . . . Yes, it begins to look as if some of the Senators would soon go into special session at the Shoreham Blue Room to draw up a farm bill.

• • • • •

It's a pity the godfathers of the Capital didn't scatter the names of the avenues with some thought of geographical realities . . . It would have been a help to the unoriented stranger . . .

• • • • •

As it is, Colorado and Arkansas avenues are roughly in the northeastern part of town, though named for western states . . . Georgia avenue is a northern thoroughfare . . . New Hampshire avenue is mostly in the western part of the city, and South Dakota is near the eastern city limits.

Of course, the state of South Dakota was only a gleam in Daniel Boone's eye when the Capital was laid out.

Few of the "sights" of Washington flabbergast the average tourist from the hinterland so much as the Freer Gallery . . . As art galleries go, the building is a gem . . . And each painting is displayed as exquisitely as a jewel on a velvet tray, with an appropriate setting and plenty of room, so it won't clash with other paintings.

• • • •

But the average tourist doesn't "get" the wan, fragile Chinese pictures; he doesn't appreciate the austere, simple lines, the pallid coloring, the preciousness of the pure stroke . . . And the anaemic pictures by Whistler, all after sunset on a foggy day, seem to him to suffer from jaundice and undernourishment . . . He emerges from his circuit of the galleries bewildered, feeling a little cheated, even if it was free.

• • • •

Hint to the State Department: The best retort to Herr Joe Goebbels' new starry-eyed theory that German-Americans remain Germans, and therefore Nazi, is: Of the 70,000,000 German-Germans, only 3,000,000 or so are Nazis, and the Nazi triumvirs had better nazify and feed Germany before it begins to nazify well-fed Americans . . . And there's plenty of room on the ships back to Germany before transatlantic fares go up.

• • • • •

Potomac pifflo: There seems to be a swing toward smooth-shaven secretaries of state. Lansing, Colby and Stimson were all moustached, and Hughes wore several sets of whiskers on one face . . . But Kellogg and Hull have a pristine American smoothness; no diplomatic tricks lurking behind underbrush . . . The feather-palm in the foyer of the Pan-American building has bumped into the roof, so tall has it grown, and they'll have to add a penthouse for it.

Hunter Finds Hidden Loot.

Hagerstown, Oct. 7.—Earl Hart was hunting groundhogs yesterday near this city when he found an expensive sterling silver service set in a burlap sack which had been hidden under a pile of wire and debris. Police believe the silverware was stolen.

It's a Big Job Counting Noses of Nation's Jobless!

Unemployment census questionnaires are coming off the Government's presses at the rate of 3,000,000 a day. They automatically are folded and then bundled for delivery to the postoffice.

As the sheets of the census blanks come off the press at the Government Printing Office a pressman inspects them frequently to make sure there have been no mistakes or errors anywhere.

Tax Protested By Connecticut Citizens' Group

Both Priviledge Levy and Increased D. C. Budget Are Condemned.

Protest against the business privilege tax and against any increase in the District budget was registered last night by the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association.

As a substitute for the gross receipts tax the association recommended a sales-tax levy. This, its advocates argued, would be a fairer method of taxation, because it would apply both to all Washington residents and to visitors here.

Harry C. Grove was re-elected president of the association. Other officers named last night are: Thomas B. Weigle, first vice president; William H. Ross, second vice president; Susan L. Frasier, secretary; Elizabeth Groves, treasurer. Miss Groves and David Babp were made delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

School Tuition Urged.

At the first fall meeting of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations held last night at the Ninth Precinct Police Station, a motion was adopted favoring the suggestion that out-of-town children attending District schools be required to pay adequate tuition.

It was pointed out that many children from nearby Maryland and Virginia who now attend Washington schools pay no tuition and that eight schools in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties have closed.

The conference went on record favoring an East Washington site for the proposed Jefferson Memorial and voted to lead in a movement to get all interested groups united so that a workable, scientific scheme for the District might be worked out. Andrew F. E. Scheer, conference head, presided.

Flood Damage Studied.

Consideration of a committee report on methods of preventing flood damage from Oxon Run, occupied members of the Washington Highlands Citizens Association in their first fall meeting held last night at the home of H. D. Cole, 100 Xenia street, president of the association.

The association tabled a resolution petitioning Congress and the District Commissioners to investigate causes of traffic delay.

Nominations for officers for the coming year, to be elected at the next meeting of the Washington Highlands Association, include R. Clark and M. T. Warren for president; Mrs. R. Clark and H. A. Yeager, for first vice president; W. B. Lovejoy (unopposed), for second vice president, and Mrs. H. D. Butler (unopposed), for treasurer.

Miss Vera Barnes and Mr. W. W. Barnes were named as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Association.

Heating Defended By Sultan's Aide

Capt. H. S. Bishop, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, yesterday came to the defense of the District Engineer Department in answer to criticism voiced by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, regarding delays in installing school heating equipment.

The delay in completing the M street heating plant, which is keeping 1,700 colored children away from schools, was due to the inability of the contractor to get delivery of boilers, he said.

The temporary closing of other schools, he said, was caused by "emergency situations" and adoption of stricter regulations recently. He asserted the work is being pushed ahead as rapidly as possible.

Capt. McHenry Named 5th Battalion Instructor

Capt. George W. McHenry, U. S. M. C., has been assigned as inspector-instructor of the Fifth Battalion, Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, it was announced at Marine Corps Headquarters yesterday.

Relieving Maj. Lewis B. Reagan, U. S. M. C., who has gone to Quantico, Va., to attend the Marine Corps Schools (correct), Capt. McHenry has been on duty at the headquarters in the Navy Department.

Leopards, Dragon, Orang-Utan Among Favorites in Post Contest.

The giraffes, black leopards, Komodo dragon and lady orangutan seem to be the most popular members of the Zoo's new collection, if one may judge by the number of suggestions entered thus far in The Post's names competition.

Everyone, from children in the low grades to dowagers, seems eager to have the pair of giraffes called Periscope and Telescope, Tiny and Tim, Skyscraper and Peek-a-boo, or any of a number of other combinations.

Among late nominations for the pair of black leopards, gifts of the Crown Prince of Johore, are Black Jumbo and Black Mumbo, Othello and Desdemona, Windsor and Wally, Prince Joe and Princess Hora (after the donor) and scores more.

The dragon lizard has brought forth such suggestions as Liz, Nogard (dragon, spelled backward), Sleepy, Butch, et cetera. Many entrants have submitted Susie, Susie-Q or variations thereof for the orangutan, apparently forgetting that the Zoo already has an orangutan named Susie.

Anyway, the contest is going to run several days longer so there is still plenty of time to forward your name preferences to the Zoo Names Editor, The Washington Post. Judges are now being selected and their names will be announced shortly.

Goat Antelope

Washington Zoo's new serow (goat antelope) will be the only one on public exhibition in the United States, at least as far as Director William M. Mann knows. The serow is still in quarantine at Athenia, N. J., with the rest of the hooved animals, but this group of about 18 specimens is expected to arrive here some time next week.

If it will help you pick a name for this queer creature, he is reddish in color, rather ugly and has big ears. He has a pair of long black horns, which he can use handily when in trouble.

The serow, so it is said, pursues solitary habits and loves nothing more than a steep, rough slope to climb. He is a bit on the shy side but a mighty dangerous critter if man or beast picks a quarrel with him or his mate.

Publicity Director Releases Nuptials By Mimeograph

Substituting a mimeographed release for the more conventional engraved card, Gilbert Stringer, former publicity director for the National Council for Prevention of War, has announced that his marriage to Miss Helen Olmstead will take place in the First Congregational Church at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Simultaneously Stringer notified friends in "the trade" that with his venture into matrimony he has terminated his connection with the National Council for Prevention of War. Beginning October 18 he will direct publicity for the New Haven, Conn., Y. M. C. A.

Miss Olmstead has been employed as secretary by the Federal Reserve Board.

Citizens Act to Keep Silver Spring Rink

The Silver Spring Citizens Association, in an open meeting last night, voted 61 to 4 to keep the skating rink at the Armory.

Capt. Frank L. Hewitt and H. F. Sedgewick, members of the Armory board, and Maj. Howard W. Cutler argued the Armory and the National Guard benefited by the rink.

Mrs. Frank Williams and Mrs. C. W. Mitchell asserted the rink caused congested traffic conditions.

The organization adopted a resolution urging the county commissioners to make a survey of traffic conditions in Montgomery County, and report on ways and means of increasing safety.

Redskins Scalped Nudes for Nudity, Collier Surmises

By the Associated Press.

John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, poked fun last night at a postoffice mural by Frank Mechau, of Redstone, Colo., depicting Indians scalping nude women, apparently after pillaging a stage coach.

"That's the craziest thing I ever saw," he exclaimed. "There could not be any fact like this."

"It starts out being a slander against the pioneer women, as I view it. Obviously, from this picture they were riding along naked and the Indians scalped them for indecency."

Collier said that while the picture is said to illustrate the "dangers of the mail," stage coaches which carried the mail accommodated only four to six persons, whereas more than 15 are shown in the picture.

Businessmen To Hear Plea For Free Lunch

Citizens' Committee Will Explain School Help Campaign Today.

Businessmen interested in the drive to secure hot school lunches for Washington's needy children will meet for a luncheon at the Harrington Hotel today to hear members of the citizens' emergency committee explain the situation behind the campaign and to offer their services.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, chairman of the businessmen's committee, will preside. Speakers will include Mrs. John Boyle, jr., drive chairman; Mrs. Mary Steele, of the Works Progress Administration, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

An attendance of between 200 and 300, representing all business and fraternal groups of the District, is expected.

Five businessmen's associations yesterday added their indorsement to the movement. They were the Northeast, Southwest, Georgia Avenue, Georgetown and Central groups.

Estimate Reduced.

Mrs. Boyle announced that the $100,000 estimate first reached as the amount needed for lunches throughout the school term has been reduced to $67,500, following a survey which shows that the number of children to be fed is reduced below that of last year.

Eight thousand children were on the free-lunch rolls last session. "I am happy to announce," Mrs. Boyle said, "that this number is now considerably smaller, and so reduced we have estimated food costs now on the basis of 5,000 children."

The charity ball, which will help finance the project, has been set for October 26 at the Mayflower. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will serve as honorary chairman of the ball, with Miss Ruth Madden as co-chairman. All proceeds will go into the lunch fund.

Representative Sends Check.

The connection between underfeeding and tuberculosis was stressed in a radio address by Donald Sheehan, director of education for the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association.

Dean Noble Powell, of the cathedral, and Mrs. Powell have volunteered to provide for one child's lunch throughout the year.

$1,000 Theft Falls In Md. Jurisdiction

Investigation of a $1,000 robbery at the edge of the District was delayed for several hours yesterday while Washington and Maryland police settled a problem of jurisdiction.

Maryland police were inclined to believe the home of Mrs. Jack Homes, 1701 Eastern avenue, from which $1,000 in receipts from her husband's gasoline business was stolen, lay in the District. Washington authorities though otherwise.

Battered Child, 3, In Hospital Here; Mother Detained

A 3-year-old child was in Gallinger Hospital last night with bruises and cuts on her head and bruises on her back, while police held her mother and a friend for investigation.

The condition of the victim, Marie Miller, of 234 Third street northwest, is not regarded as serious by physicians of the children's ward.

Mrs. Marie Miller, the mother, and Henry Terrell, the friend, were arrested by Precinct Detective W. L. Rank and Policewoman Ruby Brant after two neighbors, one the father of five children, had entered separate complaints about alleged beatings being administered Baby Marie.

Police today will confer with the district attorney about preferring charges against Mrs. Miller, who is held at the Woman's Bureau, and Terrell, who is a prisoner in First Precinct lockup.

Bridge Tourney Led by Wife of Sen. Van Nuys

Mrs. Van Deventer and Partner High Scorers in Bridge Match.

By Marian H. Barre.

Mrs. Winslow Van Deventer and Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, wife of the Senator from Indiana, topped a field of 22 pairs in the first session of the women's pair contest, initial event in the District of Columbia bridge championships, yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel.

The leaders scored 173 match points to 160 for Mrs. C. W. Zimmer and Mrs. E. L. Clites, in second place. Mrs. C. B. Pennebaker and Mrs. A. P. Stockvis were third with 153½ points. Fourth place went to Mrs. W. L. Clark and Mrs. M. Ruggles, 151½, and a half a point below came Mrs. V. A. Clarke, one of the defending champions, playing with Mrs. H. C. White.

Mrs. M. R. West, who won the Columbia Cup with Mrs. Clarke last year, was paired with Mrs. J. H. Lemon and tied for tenth place with 141½ match points. In thirteenth place were Mrs. Robert Fuller, feminine star of the Asbury Nationals, and Mrs. William McKenney, wife of the secretary of the National League. The final session of the women's pair game will be played this afternoon. Scores of yesterday will be counted in the final total.

Two other events got off to a belated start Thursday evening. The mixed pair contest, for man and woman partnerships, was played on one side of the room while the less-experienced players were competing in the intermediate event for the trophy of the Evening Star. Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon played in defense of the Capital Cup in the mixed-pair event. The attendance in both games was larger than in any previous tournament. Final session of mixed pairs is scheduled for this evening. The intermediate game will be concluded on Saturday evening, simultaneously with the finals in open pairs.

Prince Georges Citizens Seek Road Cost Data

The Prince Georges County Federation of Citizens Associations last night demanded that the Maryland State roads commission and the county commissioners account for costs of roads repaired or constructed during the last year.

"It is impossible to learn from the auditor's report where or how money was spent. Of $78,000 raised in this county last year from a 12-cent special roads tax, $22,000 was returned to incorporated towns. There has been no report on how the remaining $56,000 was spent."

Mulligan intimated the State had charged unreasonable amounts for surveying certain roads, and asserted the charge to the county for road equipment last year exceeded original cost of the equipment.

Judge Alfred D. Bailey, president of the federation, told delegates a plan for flood control had won initial approval from the United States engineer's office for the Prince Georges area.

D. C. Jail Record Set in September

A new high for prisoners in the District Jail for the month of September was announced yesterday by Thomas M. Rives, superintendent.

During the past month 754 persons were incarcerated in the institution, Rives said. This is the largest for the month of September in the history of the jail. The male prisoners, Rives said, were required to sleep on mattresses in the cell blocks. Double-decker cots were installed in the women's section to take care of the overflow.

Tree to Be Donated At Stratford Hall

Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador to Great Britain, will present a tree to Stratford Hall, Westmoreland County, Va., in a celebration October 12, it was announced yesterday by the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation.

Stratford Hall, ancestral home of the Lee family, was burned 200 years ago by "a pernicious crew of transported felons," angered when Thomas Lee issued a warrant for their arrest. Queen Caroline, wife of George II, gave Lee £300 to rebuild Stratford Hall.

The tree presented by Mrs. Bingham is intended as a tribute to George II as well as the present King of England, George VI.

D. C. Advisers Meet Today On Tax Plans

Reorganization Scheme to Be Discussed at Same Time.

The special District tax committee and its civic advisory council will hold their first meeting today in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The fiscal problem will be explained to the advisory committee members, who represent the leading civic and trade organizations of the city, and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan will outline his plan for estimating the city's revenue and expenditures for the next five years.

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, announced yesterday he was willing to accept the suggestion of Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, that joint hearings be held on the District tax program and Governmental reorganization plan.

A similar procedure was proposed by Senator King last session, but members of the House committee declined. As a result, the tax hearings dragged out throughout the spring and the Senate Committee was forced to act hastily on the House bill.

Even then the measure was delayed so long that it did not become effective until six weeks after the beginning of the fiscal year.

District officials hope this year to have the tax program ready for submission to Congress as soon as it convenes so that it will not become clogged in the adjournment rush.

Joint action on the reorganization plan will improve the chances for Congressional action at next session, leaders hope. Senator King has data on the subject produced by a Senate committee survey several years ago, and Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, began gathering material with the idea of drafting a bill before adjournment of the last Congress.

Regardless of whether or not a special session of Congress is called, the District tax problem is not expected to be taken up on Capitol Hill before January.

Retirement Board Gives Back 5 Jobs

Russell A. Dettman and five other Railroad Retirement Board employes recently dismissed at the end of their six-month probationary periods have been reinstated by the board, it was announced yesterday. All six came back with the understanding that they must serve three months' additional probationary time.

Board officials said the reinstatements were not effected by any union of Government employes. An issue had been made of Dettman's dismissal by the United Federal Workers of America, but a board spokesman said this union had no more to do with the reinstatement than did the American Federation of Government Employes, with which the other five are affiliated. There was no hearing between the union and the board on the matter, it was stated.

The original dismissal came in the routine operation of the board's personnel affairs and the reinstatements were of a similar nature, officers said.

District Officials Are Club's Guests

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commission, headed a delegation of District department heads attending the "District Day" luncheon of the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel yesterday. They were introduced by Col. William H. McCarty.

Col. McCarty paid high tribute to the efficient manner in which the affairs of the District are handled and stated that the Cosmopolitan Club is "whole-heartedly behind the commissioners in their efforts to give this city an administration of which we can be proud."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

The Nazis' World-Embracing Advertising Campaign Will Be Subject of Variety Club Luncheon Speaker

BELL.

AFTER what is reported to have been a bit of spirited internal discussion, the Variety Club of Washington has determined to embrace the factor of timeliness in the chief entertainment feature of its second luncheon of the season, to be held in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel next Monday at 1 p. m.

V. F. Calverton, described as a brilliant speaker, as well as editor, novelist, and traveler of note, has been scheduled to address the Varieteers on a subject that is confidently expected to tax the luncheon capacity of Barker Harry P. Somerville's capacious wayside inn. Mr. Calverton will come to Washington from New York especially to discuss the more or less burning topic of "Selling Naziism—the World's Greatest Advertising Campaign."

The subject matter of this talk is said to pack astounding revelations that heretofore, perhaps, have been taken too lightly in this country. Mr. Calverton has made an exhaustive study of this insidious matter, and his talk to the club promises to be not only a colorful and gripping recital of one of the currently vital subjects of the day, but also a challenge to the thoughtfulness of a public that extends far beyond the limited membership of Variety.

Comprised primarily of showmen and those closely associated with them in the conduct of the theater business and allied enterprises, the local tent No. 11 in the national organization of Variety Clubs is understood to have pondered the advisability of presenting Mr. Calverton with a vague fear of reprisals in the back of its collective mind.

As a comforting antidote for its anxiety, in the form of a mass display of the naval strength of the United States, I suggest that the Variety Club attend tonight's performance at the Earle Theater. "Navy Night" will be celebrated at the Earle tonight, when the senior officials and ranking officers of the Navy Department will see Annapolis Salute" as guests of Zone Manager John J. Payette of Warner Brothers. Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson and Assistant Secretary Charles Edison head the highly starched and gold-braided invitation list. Following their names, appears a directory of departmental executives and high officers and their staffs that bristles with rear admirals, commanders, lieutenant commanders, captains, and what not in the sword-and-epaulets ranks. There isn't a petty officer in the lot, although a couple of bos'n mates and a few belaying pins might do Mr. Calverton the most good in an emergency!

Probably the finest Babel of Irish brogues outside the Abbey Theater Players from Dublin, now happily in this country, is to be found in the Blackfriars Guild of Washington.

That is one reason for the guild's forthcoming production of Lennox Robinson's domestic comedy, "Far Off Hills," to be given in St. Paul's Auditorium on October 31, November 1 and 2. However, Director Denis Connell is sacrificing some of this wealth of rich Celtic accent in the interest of realism.

In "Far Off Hills" only the older generation will speak in the purling Erin lilt. Only a little accent will be found in the speeches of the young people, thus emphasizing the difference between generations, and lending the play effective contrast. Brother and sister, John and Theresa Wilson, will play the leads, just as they did in "The White-Headed Boy." They roll their tongues a bit, in the manner of the ould sod, and get married in the end.

The Rialto Theater is in again. "Bury the Dead," the sensational war play, will be presented on its stage Armistice Week—November 8 to 13—by a new theatrical group. Professional actors will assume a majority of the leading roles and a popular scale of prices, still to be announced, will prevail. The outcome of this initial venture to a considerable extent will influence the plans of the new group for the establishment of a permanent repertory theater in the National Capital. Such a theater, they feel, should present, not a repertory of saccharine revivals of fluffy comedies of the past, nor yet the blood and thunder melodramas of the nineteenth century, but rather a representative list of significant plays of today. It is Delbert Clark, 717 Albee Building, who assures me that further details of this project will be coming along from time to time. This, I believe, still does not clinch the evasive matter of the Rialto's permanent future policy. But it might, at that.

• • • •

Once more, Washington is to have a queen for its Halloween celebration. And once again, the regal woman will be chosen by a committee of eight, under the chairmanship of Miss Ella C. Werner. The others, whose superior powers of appraisal of feminine pulchritude, thisa and thata and stuff and things will be availed of in making the selection, include Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, who served as chairman in 1935-36; Robert B. Swope, president of the Rotary Club, and the eagle-eyed and high-strung incumbents of the five local drama desks, save the mark.

According to tentative plans, the judging will take place in the offices of the Greater National Capital Committee on Tuesday, October 26, at 4 p. m. And may the best pan win is what I always say.

Dots and Dashes.

Gaston Baty, who dramatized Flaubert's "Madame Bovary"—pronounced "Bovary"—at the National, began his rise to fame as the head man of the French theater with an easy one—"Hamlet" . . . His version of "Faust" is a current hit at his Montparnasse Theater in Paris . . . While several members of the "Madame Bovary" cast—still pronounced "Bovary"—are new to America, that most wholesome and refreshing of actresses, Viola Roache, was seen here in "Pride and Prejudice" and "Jane Eyre," with Katharine Hepburn, and Irving Morrow in "Jane Eyre," and with Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "Romeo and Juliet" . . . They seem to run to Katharines, with two "a's" . . . And Harold Vermilyea, the Charles Bovary—yeah, same way—in the same company, once was secretary to Augustus Thomas, dramatist, and later to Robert L. Owen . . . Also he played stock in Baltimore and has been on the air with Judith Anderson, Miriam Hopkins, Maude Adams, Helen Hayes, Margaret Sullavan, Jane Cowl, Margaret Anglin, Elissa Landi, ZaSu Pitts, Mary Boland and other first fighters on the Rudy Vallee hour . . . "Anne of Green Gables," dramatized from the Montgomery novel by Alice Chadwicke, will be presented by the St. Paul Players, in their auditorium at 1421 V street, October 25 and 26 . . . Louise Shea will appear as the titular orphan . . . Bernice Erma Thornton, Agnes Josephine Talbot, and Irene Cort, the three rope-skipping tap dancers in Maj. Bowes' "Dixie Jubilee," at the Capitol, hail respectively from Providence, R. I.; Liverpool, England, and St. Louis, Mo. . . . So Liverpool is "in or near New York," is it? . . . Eight Walt Disney cartoon comedies in that Mickey Mouse birthday party being tossed by Manager Angie Ratto at the Palace tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. . . . There ain't no such hour! . . . Reginald Owen is to be found in Loew places this week . . . Plays the family friend, Douriel, with Gladys George in "Madame X," at the Capitol, and the old gentleman with the knees in "The Bride Wore Red," with Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, and Robert Young, at the Palace . . . Billie Burke, a hit in the latter, was born in Washington, D. C., on August 7, 1885—and looks every day of 28 . . . Ponce de Leon should hear about this . . . The annual District One-Act Play Tournament will be cracked open on Tuesday night, October 12, in Roosevelt High Auditorium, by the Eckington Players in "God Caesar," by Marjorie Price; the Southeast Community Players in "The Moving Finger," by Percival Wilde, and the Jewish Center Theater of the J. C. C., in "The Government Regrets," by Sidney Box . . . Any crystal gazer can tell you that you'll find the President's Chicago speech and the first World Series game in the newsreels today . . . Mama of Joneses Greets Own Kin

Recently arrived from the East are Lois Irene and Phyllis Helene Chandler, her daughters. Both girls have been attending Columbia University, but will transfer their college studies to Southern California.

During the daytime, Miss Byington mothers her screen brood in "Borrowing Trouble," seventh of the Jones Family series. At night she broadens her household activities to include her two attractive daughters.

New Films Inspired by News Events

Continuing his highly successful policy of turning current events into box-office attractions, Darryl F. Zanuck, vice president in charge of production at Twentieth Century-Fox, has included almost a dozen stories from the headlines in this season's production schedule.

These run the gamut from war in Spain and aggression in China to satirical and amusing treatments of the New Deal and sit-down strikes here at home.

War-torn Spain formed the background for "Love Under Fire," second of the new season's productions featuring Loretta Young and Don Ameche. Soon to go before the cameras is "Shanghai Deadline," based on present conditions in the Far East.

"All Baba Goes to Town," Eddie Cantor's musical extravaganza, just completed, shows how the New Deal might come to Bagdad. Scheduled to go into production before the end of the year is "Mr. Nickelby Sits Down," a take-off on the series of sit-down strikes.

Just as football is making the headlines, "Life Begins in College," the football musical which raises the Ritz Brothers to stardom, is released. "Big Town Girl," soon to go into production, has its climax in a disastrous flood such as those that ran rampant recently in the Ohio Valley.

"One Mile From Heaven" is based on an actual case in the court of Judge Ben Lindsay, in Denver. Jane Withers' "45 Fathers" had its inspiration in the story of the adoption of an orphaned child by a group of theater managers, which made headlines in Pittsburgh some months ago.

"Dangerously Yours," in which Cesar Romero and Phyllis Brooks are co-featured for the first time, had its parallel in the files of the United States Customs Department, and "Borrowing Trouble," latest of the popular Jones Family series, concerns itself, in part, with the Big Brother Movement.

Spartan Spirit Buoys Former Film Favorite

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 5.—It's hard to write this story about Anna Q. Nilsson without sounding like a sob sister in a movie fan magazine.

You must remember Anna. Her name twinkled over theater box-offices throughout the land ten years ago. She was the girl with the bluest eyes in Hollywood and the yellowest hair. She was the heroine of many a celluloid drama, the recipient of one of the biggest salaries in movieland.

In 1928 she signed her higest paying contract and was ready to join the rush to the talkies. She went for a morning canter. Her horse threw her and when Miss Nilsson tried to stand up — she couldn't.

There followed for her nine years in hospitals and sanitariums while her shattered hip mended. Now she's recovered. Her eyes are as big and as blue as they ever were. Her hair is as blonde, her smile as as bright, and her determination to make a name for herself all over again in the movies is as strong as it was when she first came to this country from Sweden.

No Bungalow Now.

We talked to her today in her tiny dressing room at M.-G.-M., where she is playing a small part in the forthcoming crime story, "Behind the Headlines." Ten years ago, Anna would have had a bungalow to herself and a maid and all the fluffy-ruffles to which reigning stars feel themselves entitled.

Today she had nothing but a cubicle with room only for a dressing table and two chairs. She didn't even have her name on the door. She was starting at the bottom again —and she was grateful for the chance.

"Those years in the hospital really weren't so bad," she smiled. "They gave me time to think. And my friends, they were wonderful! Fortunately I have saved a large part of my salary—it seems fantastic now—and I never had to worry about money. I still don't, even if I don't succeed in the films again, but I'm not going to think about that. I know I'll make good. I just know I will."

During the first year after her accident she was in a plaster cast. For two more years she had to remain in bed, while physicians despaired of her ever walking again.

"But they let me out finally, with a steel brace on my back," she said. "I hobbled around for a while on crutches and eventually I graduated to two canes, and then to one. I was weak and tired, but I could walk. The rest of the time I have spent getting back my health.

Retains Her Beauty.

Miss Nilsson is radiant now. She can't play ingenue parts, of course, but then neither must she take old lady roles. There are no wrinkles on her face, no roll of fat on her neck. She looks more mature than she did ten years ago, but no older than many a present-day screen favorite when the makeup is wiped off and the flattering lights are dimmed.

During the last two years Miss Nilsson has been traveling in Europe and writing stories about the movies for the Scandinavian film magazines.

There is one other thing about her which has been bothering us, on and off, for many a year, and that is the significance of her middle initial.

It means Tuesday.

"That was the day I was born," Miss Nilsson said. "My father took the Swedish word for Tuesday and gave it a feminine touch, thus: Qverentia.

"The word also has another meaning. My old pastor told me about it at home this summer. He said it meant 'ever-seeking.'

Will Travel.

When Claudette Colbert completes her role in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," she and her husband, Dr. Joel Pressman, will leave for a vacation in southern Europe. They expect to be gone about three months.

'Double or Nothing' Is Right!

New York, Oct. 7.

ART: The art movement finally has come to Hollywood, and a number of its most eminent citizens have pledged contributions ample enough to establish an art museum there . . . Mrs. Sam Goldwyn attended a meeting of the sponsors and then described the plans to her husband . . . "How much will this art thing cost me?" he asked . . . "$25,000," his wife replied . . . The producer pondered a while. "I think," he decided, "I'd better put my art into my pictures!"

ENTERPRISE: George Balanchine, who is staging the dances for the "Goldwyn Follies," will include a Clothesline Ballet number for that film . . . "We pull the clothesline according to beat," one of the dancers asked, "but suppose there's no more line? Do you still want us to keep dancing after that?" . . . "Yoss," replied Balanchine, "dott is vott I vont. Dot iss ballet." . . . "But isn't that a silly thing to do?" the dancer continued . . . "Yoss," returned Balanchine—who was the chereographer for the Russian Ballet which featured Fokine and Nijinsky—"Yoss, my dear girrrl . . . but all ballet ees silly!"

FEAR: Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker, put up a new sign at his country home. The sign, a large one, reads: "Beware of Minet." . . . Minet isn't a Great Dane, nor is it any animal to be feared. Minet is the cat belonging to Deems Taylor, boarding at the Rosses.

CELEBRATION: Garett Holmes is the author of "The Preacher," in which one of the characters is Harry Blackmer, who fled to France during the Teapot Dome investigation . . . The author is the wife of George E. Holmes, who was Blackmer's attorney . . . The book was released yesterday and a cocktail party was tendered for the author. Some one erred and sent an invitation to Harry F. Sinclair, another of the Teapot Dome gentlemen. And Mr. Sinclair accepted the invitation!

YOUTH: The London Express has assigned its American correspondent to interview Freddie Bartholomew and write a series of articles. The series is to be entitled: "The Burden of Life—at 13!"

SEARCH: Lem Ward, director of the Federal Theater Project's "Processional," found it almost impossible to cast the role of the heavy—a rabid, night-riding Ku Kluxer . . . a timely move, in view of Mr. Justice Black's confession . . . Mr. Ward finally discovered the man who could capture the flaming spirit of religious bigotry and intolerance. The program gives his name—Solomon Goldstein.

FEMININITY: Dorothy Parker broadcast from Madrid . . . A few weeks ago, when Miss Parker sailed for Europe on the Normandie, Dixie Tighe, the ship-news columnist, asked her: "And are you going to Spain?" . . . "Spain," was the cryptic reply, "is a place where people go—who have no business there."

PREPARATION: The story now going the rounds is of the three rouged gentlemen who visited a bar. "I'll have a Coca-Cola," the first one ordered . . . The bartender turned to the second one. "I'll have an orangeade," was the order. "Thweet, pleathe." The bartender turned to the third—who said: "And I'll just have a glath of water. You see, I'm driving!"

Eight More Days Remain in Drive for 75,000 Members Here.

With eight days of the campaign remaining Red Cross Roll Call headquarters reported last night that enrollment had reached 32,769, approaching the half-way mark in the drive for 75,000 members.

Yesterday's enrollment of 7,487 surpassed all previous records for a single day, according to Marcy L. Sperry, Roll Call chairman.

Led by the Government group with 23,557 members, various units have reported enrollments which, in some cases, are greater than the final figures in last year's campaign. E. Barrett Prettyman, chairman of the professional group, revealed yesterday that enrollment of nurses and other hospital personnel had already reached 1,198, as compared with 487 at the conclusion of the 1936 Roll Call.

General business, financial, and Government groups yesterday announced numerous 100 per cent enrollments, including the District Minimum Wage Board, Accounting Division of the Treasury, office of th Chief of Coast Artillery, Henderson-Winder Co., investments, and the Occidental Restaurant.

A radio program over WMAL yesterday featured Miss Mable T. Boardman in a discussion of Red Cross activities. Included in the program were a veteran from Walter Reed Hospital, a blind student and staff members of the local Red Cross chapter.

Break May Bring Prisoners' Removal

By the Associated Press.

Director James V. Bennett of the Federal Bureau of Prisons said yesterday he was considering transferring all Federal prisoners now in the Cuyahoga County Jail at Cleveland, Ohio, to other institutions, as a result of a jail break there September 22.

Bennett said that as an alternative the Government might board only such Federal prisoners at the jail as could be tried within 30 days.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 7.—Wonder how many of you realize that the letters you write to Hollywood's stars have a direct and powerful influence on the careers of those same stars? All fan mails is cleared through a special department in each studio. An exact record is kept from month to month, of the number and character of the letters received by each contract player—and the producers watch that record like hawks. By it they judge the box office appeal of John and Jane Star.

The total number of letters received by a star during any given month is not nearly as significant as the comparison between the number received in one month and the number received during another. Is the star's popularity on the wane, or on the increase? The graphs made in the fan mail department answer the question exactly. A sudden increase, or a sudden rise, never causes worry or joy. That is usually the normal result of a new picture being thrown into hundreds of theaters. But when the increase is a steady movement forward, the producers rub their hands and begin to think about giving John or Jane a raise.

And when the slump continues over a period of months, the star's name is soon stricken from the studio rolls. By the general tone of the fan mail the casting department determines what type of roles a player is best suited for. If the majority of the letters are from youngsters and the very old, the star should be cast in light, frivolous parts. If the letters are from middle-aged persons who use good stationery, it's time to give the star a break in serious drama.

You can determine the fate of your favorites by the letters you write them. So write—but think first.

I heard a touching story today. About two years ago an extra girl who had often worked with Jean Harlow was taken ill. Doctors said she would die unless a major operation were performed and Jean, knowing the girl's financial plight, quietly arranged for the services of a famous surgeon and paid the bill. It was a gift—not a loan. Today, that same girl is the wife of a wealthy oil man. I agreed not to reveal her name, but you will be glad to know that she did not forget. A few days ago, she established a fund of several thousand dollars which is to be used for the hospitalization of extras as needy as she herself was once. It will not be called the Harlow fund—but it is intended as the perfect tribute to a great-hearted girl who never publicized her many good deeds.

Ann Sheridan looked a bit provoked today—and told me her tale of woe. Last night her telephone rang and the long distance operator announced that Augusta, Ga., was calling, and wanted to reverse the charges. Ann accepted the call because she has relatives in Augusta, and a moment later heard a strange voice asking the color of her eyes. "I want to know to settle a $2 bet," the cheeky one said. "I'm afraid I was sort of snappy about it," Ann told me. "I informed her that my eyes, normally, are hazel, but that just then they were a blazing red."

One of Hollywood's better brands of entertainment is provided by its "Curbstone Thespians"—optimistic show-offs who haunt the gates of every studio and do their stuff in the belief that some director will see them and rush out with a starring contract. For weeks, three colored boys have camped near the main gates of Paramount and gone into a tap-dancing routine whenever an important-looking man enters or leaves. Someone ought to tell the boys that the Big Shots never use that gate. And then there was a giant of a man who used to stand just outside of C. B. DeMille's office window, beat his chest and make Tarzan noises until C. B. finally got fed up with the racket and had him shooed away. He is probably still beating his mighty bosom, but you will never see it in pictures.

Bank Leader Assails Bills to Aid Branches

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Criticism of proposed legislation for extension of branch banking was voiced today at the annual convention of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks.

Luther Harr, Pennsylvania secretary of banking and chairman of the association's executive committee, urged that the association oppose with "every force at its command" the McAdoo bills for branch banking. Introduced in the last session of Congress by Senator McAdoo, of California, the bills would allow national banks to open branches anywhere within the 12 Federal Reserve districts.

U. S. Botanists Get First View Of Lohon Plant

Scientists Bring Specimens of Cold Medicine From Remote Province.

The Lohon plant, long used by Chinese to treat chest colds but a mystery to botanists, who were unable to reach the land where it grows, will soon be studied in this country for the first time.

The National Geographic Society yesterday announced collection of the Lohon leaves, blossoms and fresh fruits by an expedition into Kwangsi Province sponsored jointly by Lingnan University and the society. Dr. G. Weidman Groff, leader of the expedition, found primitive tribesmen cultivating the plant in the mountain fastnesses of the province.

Fruit Used as Tea.

Dr. Groff reported that the Lohon was a vine with leaves and tendrils comparable to the grapevine, but more delicate. The plant grows in small patches on steep mountain slopes under semi-tropical conditions, 2,000 feet or more above sea level. The fruits range from the size of an egg to that of a tennis ball.

Chinese use the dried fruit as a remedy for lung congestion resulting from colds. They also believe it contributes to virility. The fruit is not eaten, but brewed in broth or tea.

Dr. Groff bit into one of the specimens and found it to be exceedingly sweet and rather irritating to lips and tongue.

Whether the plant actually has any medicinal value has never been determined scientifically. However, many Chinese in Washington believe it is just the thing for a bad cold—and declare that it has cured them in only a few days.

Advanced Methods Used.

Although the Lohon is grown by a shy, superstitious people, in a region isolated from civilization, they use an advanced horticultural technique.

The late Dr. Frederick V. Coville, botanist, of the Department of Agriculture, spent 20 years vainly trying to obtain specimens that would make it possible to classify the Lohon. As chairman of the society's research committee, he was instrumental, shortly before his death last January, in arranging for the expedition led by Dr. Groff.

Processing of the fruit is an important industry in market towns just inside the mountain region and in Kweilin, capital of Kwangsi Province. Traders consulted by the expedition estimated that more than 140,000 pounds of the dried fruit entered commercial channels last year.

So highly is the product prized that in Chinese cities along the coast a single dried fruit brings about 20 cents in Canton silver.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 7.

WELL, LUCIEN LELONG, the French dressmaker, was finally shoveled aboard an outward-bound lugger, and never did I see a foreigner happier at escaping from our overfriendly shores. To promote him and his stitching, he was waltzed over 12,000 American miles. He made 48 speeches, ate innumerable banquets and shook more hands than a candidate for the city council. He was fed to the molars, and tickled purple when the Normandie shoved her nose into the Hudson.

ALICE HUGHES.

Once Lucien was in our town, he placed an almost kiddish faith in me. I became a sort of Aunt Alice, and led him by the hand to his various horrid commitments. The one thing I actually had to bully him into attending turned out to be the thing that gave him his sturdiest American belt, which was an evening session of the new School of Fashion Careers, now open with a student body of 75 of the swellest girls you ever saw, from all parts of the country.

Our Gallic friends are a sentimental lot, way down under their native shrewdness and genius for crafty connivery, and Lelong was simply knocked over by the sight of those 75 faces and 150 ears drinking in every word he spoke, as gospel. He said they reminded him of Nicole, his own 17-year-old daughter, and that he was carried miles away by their youth and sincerity.

Lelong has methodized his life astoundingly. He wears, by day, only one type of blue shirt, so when he needs new ones he just calls the man and says "shirts." The same with his two suits, blue and gray. Now the poor worn-out bird is getting a little rest on ship-board. Aunt Alice has him off her hands!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—That big noise you might have heard at Fiftieth street and Park avenue was only good old Victor McLaglen, the out-sized movie star, enjoying his brief visit before shoving off the Blighty to make a film. Big Vic is a jolly, boisterous soul, and told me on the Berengaria that the only blight on his stay was the fact that the landlord insisted on breaking up his apartment in the hotel and installing a new, huge bed for his comfort!

• • • •

One of the most interesting women in this town, and one whom few see, is Mrs. Lillian Dodge, owner and president of the big industry known as Harriet Hubbard Ayer. She's a glorious, motherly sort of person you'd never suspect of being a business big-shot, but she is all of that. Beyond her cosmetics life, her big interest is her daughter, who is married to an architect and living in New Orleans.

Belts Dramatize the Simple Frock

By Ethel Ehlen.
Post Fashion Editor.

WITH THE MIDRIFF getting so much attention, due to the popularity of the corseted-like silhouette, belts are again to the fore in smart fashions. Just any belt won't do, however. With the spotlight focused on the waistline, the belt often carries the burden of the color or fabric interest for the entire costume. Both Parisian and American designers have gone in for belts in a big way this season—creating unique belts to accompany frocks of every styling.

Vionnet favors contrasting belts with the multi-colored leaf, alternating wine, green, rust and gray in overlapping suede. A belt of this type will dress up frocks of silk crepe, velvet or wool, or add a bit of formality to the classic sweater. Alix is sponsoring the narrow belt, entwining slender strips of suede and patent leather and finishing with a tiny gold buckle. Chanel is creating belts to give a widening effect to the diaphragm, giving glamour to the corselet trend, accenting the suede with glittering gold and brilliant flowers.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man She Loves, Otherwise Kindly, Has Bitter Racial Prejudices; Can These Be Tempered?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For over a year I have gone with one boy. We are not engaged but have talked seriously of marriage. I had gone with many boys before I met him but never liked anyone well enough to go steadily until I had known this boy for over three months, seeing him as one of several suitors. He is two years older than I, and very sweet, kind and exceptionally decent. We love each other very much and my parents think a great deal of him. He has always been good to me, and has done everything to make me happy. We have the same ideas and ideals, with one exception.

• • • •

He has strong racial prejudices. Ever since we have known each other we have quarreled on this one point. I had always been taught to love; not to hate; that I and my fellowmen of other races and creeds are more or less the same. On the other hand, his parents have instilled in him since babyhood strong prejudices against "foreigners." I try to avoid the subject, but it seems impossible. It comes up continually, for some reason or other.

• • • •

In a recent argument, I retorted that I considered myself no better than certain people we were discussing. He replied he could never love a girl who wasn't. Such fights are growing worse each time. In spite of the fact that the quarrels are always mended, they leave a growing residue of hard feeling.

• • • •

Tell me, how can I deal with this problem? He says if I can't change my ideas to correspond with his, we never can be happy. I cannot possibly do so, for his ideas are so strongly prejudiced and I have no hope of changing them. Can we ever be happy together? Our love is deep, but he is so headstrong on this one question. Please help me if you can. I read your column daily and have faith in your advice. Sincerely, M. M.

Bigots Seldom Yield.

DEAR M. M.: In my opinion there could be no more destructive point of difference between two persons closely associated than a conflict in attitude toward their fellow men. One's sincerely entertained social philosophy is the touchstone of one's character, and tolerance and intolerance, humanitarianism and bigotry can never be peaceably reconciled.

• • • •

If one brief year's association, be-glamoured as it has been by a rosy cloud of mutual romantic love, still has produced a not-to-be denied residue of hard feeling between you and the young man, directly traceable to your diametric and laudable opposition to his blind, unreasoning prejudice against persons of other races, it is folly to suppose this fundamental antagonism can ever be harmonized.

• • • •

It is characteristic of the bigot that he never yields. Of such it has been said: "Convince the man against his will, he's of the same opinion still." He lacks the intellectual honesty and humility (which is the beginning of wisdom) that would permit his admitting the possibility of his being in error, and he lacks the intellectual vigor and curiosity which would prompt him to inform himself fully before reaching final conclusions. Another mark of the bigot is his inevitable retreat into anger, stinging personalities, etc., when defending his theories. He cannot be calm, reasonable and authoritative in debate because his theories are emotionally, rather than logically, entertained.

• • • •

On the other hand, the person who is essentially liberal of thought, generous in judgment, cannot afford to yield or camouflage his philosophy in order to pacify a fanatic. For that is retrogression, both for the individual and for whatever portion of society his attitude and ideals might influence, either directly or indirectly. When his ideals are challenged he has a moral and intellectual obligation to expound and defend them.

• • • •

What your arguments with your beloved have amounted to is conflict between darkness and light, between intelligence and ignorance, between true vision and warped prejudice. If he cannot or will not change you should, for the sake of possible children you may one day have, dismiss him from your life. It would be a tragic sacrifice to twist your mind out of normal perspective in order to oblige him. Such a distortion might be likened to walking in a stooping position for the purpose of humoring a pint-sized man in the delusion that he was a towering six-footer. And, as I say, it is not of yourself alone you should be thinking, but of the possible influence of such a mind upon your children. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

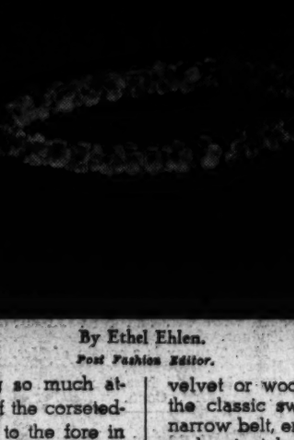
By Ida Jean Kain.

BECAUSE CURVES are on the up and up, several hundred mannequins lost their jobs this year. The mannequins were window dummies, of course, for the smart young women who model can remodel their figures. All it takes is exercise.

As long ago as last spring New York models foresaw a new trend in figures, with a curved, high bustline and slender waist. Accordingly, they spent their spare time in exercise to develop their pectoral muscles. The perfect model of today has the figure of an outdoor girl, reflecting radiant health.

Figures are constantly changing, and this time, for the better. A few years ago fashion decreed the flat-chested figure, which was achieved in many cases by wearing a binding brassiere. From the standpoint of health and the normal figure, this was the worst thing one could do, for continued binding of the breasts breaks down the tissues and results in a sagging bust line. In spite of medical warnings, however, the flat-chested vogue lasted for several years.

As a consequence of an unprecedented enthusiasm for sports and exercise, the feminine figure has again changed. The fashionable bust line has the firm, high contour of superb health, and the uplift brassiere is designed for the healthier figure.



Excellent for beautifying chest, bust and arms.

Exercise effects a remarkable improvement in bust contour. The breasts have no muscles, but position and contour are largely influenced by the supporting pectoral muscles. Weight, of course, is also an important factor, since deposits of fat in this area contribute to the size of the bust and may lower its position. Likewise, where there is insufficient fatty tissue, as with extreme underweight, the bust is undeveloped. Generally speaking, the contour of the bust is improved by bringing the weight up or down to normal, and through the practice of specific exercise.

One of the simplest exercises and one which is in favor with the models is to ben the elbows and bring the fingers of the hands together, just in front of the bust Press the fingers together strongly, to bring the chest and arm muscles into vigorous action. Relax and repeat several times.

Another effective normalizing exercise is to clasp the hands back of the head and, exerting force with first one arm and then the other, pull the clasped hands from one ear to the other. You should feel the pull through the shoulder girdle. Remember to keep your chin up.

Suggestions Are Offered for Various Types of Menus.

Here is an exercise for which you will need an assistant, but which develops a lovely bust line.

SIT ON the floor facing your partner with the soles of your feet resting against hers, each holding one end of a strong strap or rope about 18 inches in length. P-u-l-l! This mild variation of the tug-of-war develops lovely contours of the chest, bust and arms.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Diet for Underweight.

A woman, 24 years of age, 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighed 82 pounds. Her ideal weight would be 121 pounds. By increasing her food intake so that it was over 3,000 calories a day, she gained, in 12 weeks, 24 pounds.

Thin people say they can't get fat, no matter how much they eat, and that they eat enough, but the record above shows what can be done to increase weight by simple increase in food alone.

In other words, the beliefs of underweights on the subject of how much they eat, like the beliefs of overweights, cannot be relied upon.

But notice that the amount of food taken is very large. The woman was 24 years old, and weighed 82 pounds. Theoretically she required about 1,800 calories a day, or less, at that age and weight. She actually received 3,280.

It is as difficult, or more so, for these underweight people to eat the extra amount they need in order to gain as it is for the overweight to starve, and they have to be encouraged and cajoled to do it.

If they can do it, however, the diet below, containing 4,000 calories, in six meals, if continued with such substitutions as are needed to avoid monotony, will put on weight.

Breakfast—One baked apple, 2 tablespoons cream (coffee), 1 teaspoon sugar; ½ cup corn meal, 4 tablespoons cream (coffee), 2 teaspoons sugar; 1 poached egg, 1 tablespoon butter; 1 slice toast, 1 tablespoon butter, 6 ounces cocoa.

Lunch—Average serving cream of potato soup, 2 soda crackers, 3 strips, 5 inches long, crisp bacon, 1 slice entire wheat bread, 1 tablespoon butter, 4 ounces fruit gelatin, 2 tablespoons cream, 1 teaspoon sugar, 6 ounces milk.

Midafternoon—Six ounces eggnog, 2 soda crackers, 1 tablespoon butter.

Dinner—Average serving baked fish, 1 stuffed baked potato, 1 tablespoon butter, ½ cup string beans, 4 pieces, 5 inches long, celery, 1 slice entire wheat bread, 1 tablespoon butter, average helping Waldorf salad (no nuts), average serving ice cream, decaffeinized coffee, 1½ tablespoons cream, 2 teaspoons sugar.

Evening—Three halves stewed apricots, 2 crackers, 1 tablespoon butter.

On many occasions during the year, such as vacation time and moving time, Post Newspaper Boys again stand ready to render service to their customers. This is the fall moving season. The Post Newspaper Boy on your street will make the necessary arrangements for delivery of The Post to your new address according to your instructions. Or, you may call The Post circulation department—NAtional 4200 for the same service.

Another important phase of a Post Newspaper Boy's service to his customers is to collect regularly. Post Newspaper Boys are in business for themselves. Their profits come from the sale of their newspapers. Therefore, you can depend upon service in delivery, special requests in the delivery of your newspaper, and in regular, convenient collections.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Ever since Donna Frances Rosso, wife of the Italian Ambassador to the Soviet Union, arrived in the United States a few weeks ago, her friends have been eagerly awaiting news of when she would come to the Capital and how long she would be here.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Well—now both can be told. She's coming next Tuesday and this is the disappointing part—she will leave Friday the 15th.

From here she will go to Durham, N. C., to spend the week-end with her daughter, Miss Adele Bunker, at Duke University. And soon afterward, she'll be sailing back to Europe.

As this is her first visit to the United States since her marriage last January, her host of friends here had hoped she would be in Washington at least a month. There are no end of hostesses who want to entertain for her, and chances are the three and a half days she is here will be a constant whirl of parties.

As the schedule stands now, she won't have time to see half the people who want to see her, but since neither her children nor her parents are in Washington and her husband is on the other side of the Atlantic, it's lucky for her friends here that she's stopping at all.

I haven't yet been able to find out which particular friend she will stay with, or whether she will be at the Italian Embassy, but I know there are any number of homes that would gladly give her a royal welcome.

Friends Hope She Will Extend Visit

Before she left last January, she hardly had time to dispose of her home on Twenty-fourth street and attend to her packing because of the constant round of dinners in her honor. And friends who couldn't manage entertainments then had planned to do so on her return. Now, any partying for her will have to be quickly arranged and soon disposed of. Her friends are still hoping she will extend her visit, or come back here for another stay after visiting in Durham.

For a number of years before she married the Italian diplomat, the former Mrs. Frances Wilkinson Bunker was one of Washington's most popular hostesses. Her husband also made an extensive circle of friends here during the years he was Ambassador to the United States.

Before she started to this country, Signora Rosso and her husband had been vacationing in Venice, and it was hoped that he would accompany her on her visit here. When she set sail, however, he returned to his post.

Noted Canadians Arriving Today

Speaking of distinguished visitors, two noted Canadians are scheduled to arrive in the Capital today—the Chief Justice of the Dominion of Canada, Sir Lyman Poore Duffe, and an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Hon. Thibaudeau Rinfret.

The former's long and brilliant career has been studded with outstanding appointments, including the governorship of the University of Toronto in 1928, the position as administrator of the Government of Canada in 1931, and the chairmanship of Transportation Commission investigating railways in Canada in 1932.

Judge Rinfret's career has also been outstanding. Prior to his appointment to Canada's Supreme Court bench he was a law professor at McGill University

Dinner Given By Mrs. Curtis

Mrs. James F. Curtis entertained at a small and informal dinner last evening at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock. The dinner was to welcome them back to Washington after a summer at Newport where they had a house. Mr. and Mrs. Fahnestock—she is the former Beatrice Beck Tuck—have taken the home of Mrs. Peter Augustus Jay on E street.

Late last evening Mrs. Curtis left for her country home at Roslyn, L. I., for a brief stay. She will attend the marriage tomorrow in Westbury of James Hopkins Smith, jr., son of Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, of Washington and New York, and of James Hopkins Smith, to Miss Nancy Morgan, daughter of Mrs. Charles Morgan and the late Mr. Morgan.

Clubhouse Opening To Be Celebrated

Others from Virginia and Washington who have accepted invitations to be present include Walton R. Moore, counselor of the State Department and former president of the club; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, assistant administrator, Works Progress Administration; Melvin C. Hazen, Commissioner of the District of Columbia; Leslie C. Stoddard, at 2910 Que street northwest. Mrs. Harrison is the former Miss Ruth Stoddard, who made her debut here.

Mr. Smith, who spent last year with his family in Boston, was ordered in August to exciting Shanghai, where he has taken the post of American Consul. His previous positions in China were also with the Foreign Service of the State Department.

Mrs. Smith's two little daughters, Barbara, who is 7, and Deborah, who is 5, will attend school in Washington this winter.

Sets Definite Date for Capital Visit

Hessler-Henderson.

DONNA FRANCES ROSSO,

wife of Augusto Rosso, former Italian Ambassador to the United States and now Italian Ambassador to Russia, will come to Washington next week for a visit. Formerly Mrs. Frances Wilkinson Bunker, she is widely known here, having made her home in the Capital for several years before her marriage to the Ambassador last January. Judging from the photograph taken of her when she arrived aboard the Conte di Savoia several weeks ago, she still wears her hair the same way she did when Howard Chandler Christy painted this portrait.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE HOLIDAYS, always the choicest time for debuts, have been chosen by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem to present their daughters, Anne Carroll and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem, to Capital society. They are planning two parties, a tea on Wednesday, November 24, and a dance some time during the Christmas holidays, the date to be announced later.

DUDLEY HARMON.

In times when so many debutantes are making their bows at hotels or even night clubs, it is refreshing to find a mother who prefers the older way of introducing her daughters to the family friends in their own home, as Mrs. Meem plans to do. Her tea will be held at her residence at 230 Thirty-fourth place.

The Meem girls have been seesawing back and fourth on the debut situation, and until recently had not quite decided whether or not to "come out." The fact that they finally decided to does not, however, mean that they are giving themselves entirely over to frivolity this winter. Anne likes to study painting in her spare time, Eleanor goes in for singing and playing the piano, and both are going to keep up with their French.

* * * *

THE CONFUSION about who is coming out here and when, which is characteristic of Washington, where no debutante makes up her mind until the last minute, is gradually clearing away. It had been reported that Sylvia Szechenyi, younger daughter of Count and Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, would follow up her big Newport ball of the summer with another dance in Washington this winter. But the latest news from this particular front says that the Szechenyis have abandoned any such plans, especially after renting their house here to the German Ambassador. There's a chance, however, that she will attend Marsyl Stokes' ball on December 18.

HERE'S ANOTHER Washington angle to the mystery of Wye Hall, which is beginning to take on all the characteristics of a "Graustark" or a novel by Baroness Orczy. The Wellesley Hill Stillwell, who owns the Chesapeake island on which the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are rumored planning to live is a former husband of Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador.

Mr. Stillwell is by no means as mysterious as his island. Now in England for an indefinite stay, he originally comes from Chicago, where his father, Homer Stillwell, was president of the Butler General Merchandising Co., and headed the Chicago Association of Commerce. His son, however, no longer has anything to do with Butler Bros., preferring to play golf at the Yale and a Nassau County golf clubs and to divide his time between New York and England. In Manhattan he lives at the Ritz Carlton and is a member of the Union Club.

FIVE TO SEVEN: at Helen Brereton's cocktail party for Mary Cowles, whose marriage to Willard Reed will take place October 16. Among guests were Adele Smith, who will manage the art gallery being started by Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. George Garrett; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Franklin Gates—Mr. Gates is leaving Studio House to devote all his time to painting; Betsy Seymore, who has a job at Studio House this year; T. E. B. Howe, Air Attache to the British Embassy; Carolyn Chantry in a yellow outfit with a matching hat; Betty Hardie, in a smart orange and yellow tweed jacket and a black shirt, and Eleanor Patterson Roberts.

Admiral Brown Expected in D.C.

Planning Vacation in January Before Taking Over at Naval Academy.

Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, now in command of the United States fleet training squadron, stationed in Atlantic waters, and who has just received his new appointment as superintendent of the Naval Academy to succeed Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, probably will be in Washington next week.

Although Admiral Brown—class of 1902, United States Naval Academy—will not take charge of his alma mater until February 1, he will be released from his present tour of duty January 1, and with Mrs. Brown probably will take a month's vacation.

When he was in Washington in 1934-36 as aide to President Roosevelt, he and Mrs. Brown occupied the house at 3113 Woodley road, now owned by Representative Wadsworth.

Both Admiral and Mrs. Brown came from Connecticut and have a country home, Crosstrees, in Waterford.

A golfer, Admiral Brown was a familiar figure on the links of the Chevy Chase Club. A fanatical fisherman, he accompanied President Roosevelt when he was his naval aide on many a trip. The fish they caught were so-o-o big.

He also did a little angling with former President Coolidge, when as naval aide he also bossed the Presidential brig Mayflower.

Lockes Return.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ernest Locke have returned to their home here after several weeks at their summer home at Bar Harbor. They spent the early part of the summer in Europe.

U. S. Is Avoiding Extreme Courses, Expert From G. W. Believes.

The Post Club Editor.

Extreme isolation, extreme co-operation and realistic co-operation are the three courses open to this country in dealing with the situation in the Far East, Dr. William Crane Johnstone, professor of political science and dean of the junior college at George Washington University, told the Twentieth Century Club yesterday, addressing its first fall meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Johnstone, who is considered among America's foremost authorities on the Orient, advocated realistic co-operation—a policy on which the Administration apparently is embarking, he said—by calling a conference to bring about cessation of hostilities while a new peace system is worked out for the Pacific. This may mean making trade concessions to Japan in return for her relinquishing her designs in China, but these, he believes, should be made in the interest of world peace.

Interests Insufficient Basis for Direct Action

The course of extreme isolation he defined as a policy of cutting ourselves off as far as possible from hostilities, and possibly invoking the neutrality act against both China and Japan; and the course of extreme co-operation, that of invoking economic sanctions against Japan.

"Our economic interests are approximately the same in China, the Philippines and Japan," said Dr. Johnstone. "Our Far East investments are only 5 per cent of those we have in all foreign countries; our trade small in proportion to the world total and we have already made a commitment to give up the Philippines, which represented our chief territorial interests. We have built up a sentimental interest through sympathy with China over a long period of years; our political interest is the general policy of the open door, designed to take care of commerce by equality of treatment. All combined are not sufficient basis for direct action."

"The American security system for the Pacific, developed at the Washington conference, has lasted more than a decade. The situation now is much more tense and complicated than in 1931 when the first effort was made to prevent its collapse. We are now faced with working out a new plan for peace."

Business Meeting Precedes Luncheon

Dr. Johnstone was introduced by Mrs. Karl Fenning, club president, who presided at both the business meeting and program, and he and Mrs. Johnstone were guests of honor at the luncheon which followed.

Mrs. W. W. Husband and Mrs. Edward G. Montgomery were announced at the business session as new members on the Council of Social Agencies with Mrs. Fenning and Mrs. Samuel E. Herrick, chairman of the Civics-Education section, board members of the council. It was also announced that a luncheon would be given Tuesday at the Army and Navy Club in honor of Mrs. Frederick Ernest Farrington, a past president, who will leave soon for a six-month trip to India. Mrs. Edward B. Clark, chairman of the past presidents' committee, will have charge of arrangements.

With Mrs. Fenning and the guests of honor at the head table yesterday were new members and their sponsors. The former included Mrs. Clarence H. Brengle, Mrs. Henry H. Knipe, Mrs. Walter A. Browne, Mrs. Ray H. Everett, Mrs. Hugh H. Bennett, Mrs. Prentiss Wilson and Mrs. George N. Everett. The sponsors were Mrs. Edward G. Yonker, Mrs. Richard E. Claughton, Mrs. Nathan C. Grover, Mrs. Paul Everhardt, Mrs. Leonard L. Harter, Mrs. R. Thomas West and Mrs. Samuel Brosius.

Founders' Fete Of Kappa Delta Set for Oct. 23

Alumnae and Active Members to Attend Sorority Banquet.

Miss Josephine Carberry, president of the Kappa Delta Alumnae Association of Washington, has announced plans for the annual Founders' Day banquet which will be attended by members of the association and college chapters of George Washington and Maryland Universities.

The banquet will be held in the north lounge of the Kennedy-Warren on October 23 at 6:30 p. m. Miss Annabelle McCullough and Miss Regis Dunnigan are in charge of the arrangements.

Among Kappa Delta Alumnae are Mrs. William Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House, Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, wife of the Senator from Florida, and Pearl Buck, author.

Kappa Delta, which was founded at Virginia State Normal in Farmville, Va., in 1897, now has 69 active chapters on college campuses all over the United States, and 107 chartered alumnae associations. Of the four founders, two are still living, Mrs. Sara Turner White, of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Julia Tyler Wilson, of Charlottesville, Va. Mrs. Wilson, the granddaughter of President Tyler, was present at the Kappa Delta convention in June at Richmond, to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the sorority. Miss Lorraine Carter was the association's delegate.

In addition to its social activities the alumnae association supports the Kappa Delta National philanthropy at the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond where beds and a dental clinic are maintained.

It also gives support to the student loan fund sponsored by the sorority on a national basis. Last osority on a national basis. Last year 20 college women were given these scholarships, and thus enabled to stay in college.

Kappa Deltas who wish to attend the banquet and are not members of the local Washington association have been asked to notify Miss Annabelle McCullough in the Shawmut Apartments.

Miss McGee Honored by Curley Club

Banquet at Hotel Ends Series Commemorating 15th Anniversary.

Noted Church Worker Is Presented With Watch, Extolled in Talk.

Miss Mary L. McGee was the guest of honor last evening at a testimonial banquet given by the Curley Club at the Continental Hotel. The occasion marked the close of a series of affairs held by the club commemorating its fifteenth anniversary.

A native of Pennsylvania, Miss McGee, has lived in Washington for years and is employed by the Government. She has devoted much of her time to social, church and philanthropic work, and for her efforts in furthering Catholic education, received the commendation of Pope Pius XI in 1933. In 1934 she was presented with a pearl rosary by the apostolic delegate, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, a gift from the Pope.

A drama, depicting the history of the club from the time it began, was portrayed by Misses Gertrude and Edith Connor, Miss Helen Herbeck, Mrs. Fabiola M. O'Connell, Mr. and Mrs. Felix H. Kane, jr., James J. Corbett and Frank Pearson. It was under the direction of Miss Kathryn Bowers, chairman of the banquet committee, who also was toastmistress.

Among guests were the Rev. Urban Aldeman of the Capuchin College, Brookland, and the Rev. Joseph T. Kennedy, of Forest Glen, Md.

Seminary Group To Meet Monday

The Washington chapter of National Park Seminary, now known as the National Park College, which includes Baltimore and nearby Virginia and Maryland, will hold its first meeting of this season Monday afternoon. Mrs. Charles McG. Thomas, first vice president of the chapter, will be hostess at her country home on the Darnestown road about three miles beyond Rockville, Md.

Dr. Roy Tasco Davis, new president of the college, and Mrs. Davis will be the guests of honor. Dr. Davis will talk on the school, which will become a junior college.

Mrs. John Payette, chairman of the rummage sale committee, will make a report on the sale to be held this month as the first of the benefits the chapter holds each year. The proceeds go to the Children's Hospital.

Mrs. Payette will be assisted by Mrs. Layson E. Atkins, Mrs. LeRoy Sherman, Mr. Stanley E. Disney, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Robert E. Kline, jr., Mrs. John G. Ladd, Mrs. Wilson C. Thompson, Mrs. Richard H. Pretz, Mrs. Herbert Peacock and Mrs. Frank Easby-Smith.

THE WASHINGTON STORY LEAGUE, whose members "tell stories" and admit it frankly, is already preparing to welcome other story tellers from all parts of the United States at the annual convention here next August. A convention fund is being raised and the first event to this end will be a story recital by the president of the local league, Mary Ellen Dashiell, at the Washington Hotel Tuesday, October 19, at 8:30.

The league held its first meeting of the fall at the Y. W. C. A. last Saturday. Miss Georgie Ramey gave a report of the service through story telling which has been given by league members during the past summer. "Tales of the Woods" was the theme of the evening's program, which included stories by Mrs. Charles Stephenson, Mrs. Jane Donaldson, Ruth E. Barnes and songs by William Nolte, accompanied by William A. Sanderford, and by Mrs. A. M. Burns, accompanied by Mrs. Jane Donaldson.

Gilbert Stinger, who has been doing publicity for the National Council for Prevention of War, leaves October 18 for New Haven, Conn., where he will take a position with the Y. M. C. A. With him will go his bride, the present Miss Helen Olmstead, whom he will wed at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at First Congregational Church. Miss Olmstead leaves the office of the Federal Reserve Board, where she is a secretary.

The chapter will sell the books and use the proceeds for the restoration of Chestnut Grove, the birthplace of Martha Washington, in New Kent County.

THE ENTRE NOUS CLUB will open its season next Monday afternoon with a luncheon at the Highlands. Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, who has been president since the club was organized in 1925 is still its head and will preside. Another officer who has served since the beginning is Claudia Rice Scott, publicity chairman.

The Entre Nous Club devotes itself chiefly to personal welfare work—aiding children and giving a helpful hand to women who are in need of financial assistance for a short time because of illness. Contributions also have been made to Friendship House, the shoe and rubber fund of the P.-T. A. Good Will Industries and the Gospel Mission.

Tablet Will Honor Veteran of 1812

Tomorrow at 2 p. m., under the auspices of the D. C. Chapter, U. S. D., 1812, one of its officers, Mrs. Maurice Emerson, will unveil a bronze memorial at the grave of her grandfather, David Bready. The Rev. Guy P. Bready will officiate as chaplain.

David Bready, one of the youthful defenders of the National Capital and of Baltimore City, was born in Frederick County in 1796. During the War of 1812-1814 he enlisted with Captain Nicholas Turbutt's Company of Infantry, Third Regiment, Maryland Militia, serving at the Battle of Bladensburg and in September, 1814, at Fort McHenry.

He was the first leaseholder of Carrollton Manor, in Frederick County. He farmed this great tract of land for a number of years, occupying the old stone manor house (still standing) where all of his children were born.

Later Mr. Bready moved to Montgomery County, purchasing a large estate near Sandy Springs, which he named Montmorency. At his death, in 1869, he was buried in the family plot on the estate.

Mrs. Lifur Beats Mrs. Hill, 2 and 1, in Women's Golf Title Play

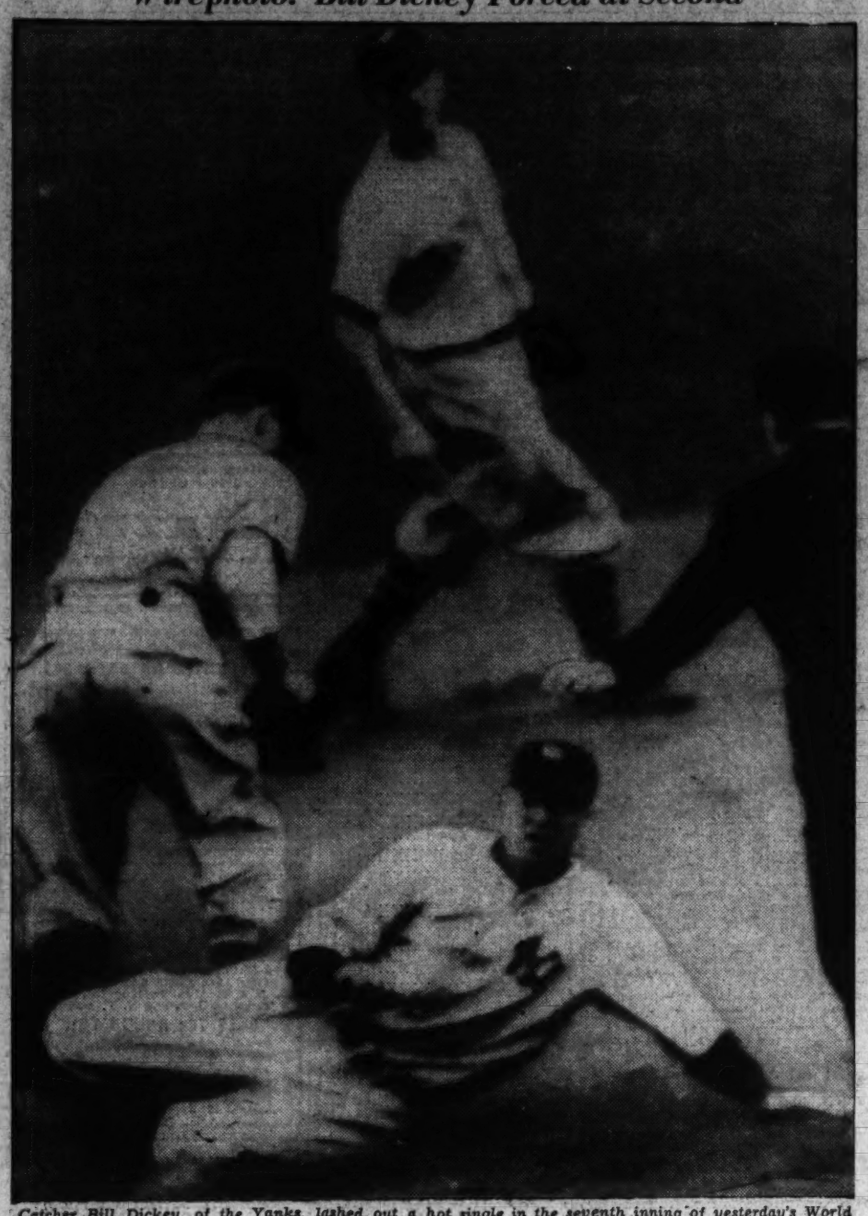
YANKS WIN SECOND, 8 TO 1

Wirephoto: Bill Dickey Forced at Second



Catcher Bill Dickey, of the Yanks, lashed out a hot single in the seventh inning of yesterday's World Series game, but later was forced out at second on Selkirk's blow to Bartell. It was a pretty stop by Bartell who threw to Whitehead (shown covering the bag). Bartell is in the background.

Mrs. Lifur Proves Jinx To Mrs. Hill

By Kenneth Gregory,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct 7.—The old "13" jinx had its inning today with Mrs. Opal S. Hill, the veteran Kansas City golfing star who seriously thought this was going to be her lucky year in quest of the Women's National Championship.

As a chilly, gale-like wind swept across the Memphis Country Club course today, Mrs. Hill saw her hopes fade for the thirteenth time when Mrs. Gregg Lifur, former California champion from Pacific Palisades eliminated her in the quarter-finals.

Mrs. Lifur, a steady stroking player who came south with a fine record on the coast, was joined in the semi-finals set up by Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Greensboro, N. C., Miss Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, and Miss Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C.

To the surprise of a large gallery, Mrs. Hill faltered badly after stroking to a 3-up lead through the first seven holes and lost the verdict to Mrs. Lifur 2 and 1.

Mrs. Page, tournament medalist for the second consecutive year and now ranked as a prime choice to win the championship for the first time, advanced with a 2 and 1 decision over Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex.

The North Carolina star, whose game has bordered closely on par since the tournament began, was paired against the youthful Miss Hemphill. Miss Hemphill, a semi-finalist last year, turned back Mrs. Charles Newbold, of Wichita, the Kansas champion, 4 and 3.

It was a close call for Miss Berg, runner-up in 1935 for the crown, in triumphing over Mrs. Helen Lawson Shepherd, of Los Angeles. Miss Berg plays Mrs. Lifur in the other half of the semifinal.

After gaining a 5-up advantage over the veteran California star through nine holes, the freckle-faced Minnesota "kid" began missing shots and short putts, and was only 1 up going to the eighteenth.

Miss Berg Gets Par.

With dusk falling and the gallery jammed around the home green, Miss Berg fired a great approach shot 12 feet from the cup to win with a par as Mrs. Shepherd drove into the rough and took 3 to reach the green.

The attractive Miss Hemphill, after batting out a par 39 on the outgoing 9 was only 1 up against Mrs. Newbold, who yesterday sprang another of the tournament upsets in beating Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, six times a former champion.

But entering the incoming stretch, Miss Hemphill fired 3 birdies and 2 pars to end the proceedings on the fifteenth green.

Mrs. Page also had trouble in mastering Mrs. Chandler. After staging the greatest exhibition thus far on the outgoing 9 with a neat 37, 2 under par, and annexing a 4-up advantage going to the tenth, Mrs. Page had to ram down a 30-foot putt on the seventeenth to beat Mrs. Chandler.

Oarsmen to Vie.

Syracuse, N. Y. Oct. 5. (U.P.)—For the first time in the history of rowing at Syracuse University, Syracuse oarsmen will engage in fall competition, it was announced by Athletic Director Lew Andreas. An eight-oared race will be held with the University of Toronto on October 23.

Wirephoto: Ruffing's a Hero Now!

Some months ago when Red Ruffing (left) was a Yankee holdout he and Col. Jacob Ruppert (right) weren't so friendly. His victory today seemed to have put the boss in a good humor. Notice Col. Jake's arm around his "favorite" pitcher!

Cliff Melton Is Victim of Batting Bee

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 7.—The World Champion Yankees today exploded the last thin vestiges of the myth that they can be beaten by good left-handed pitching. Simultaneously and by the characteristic strategy of the booming baseball they shellacked the Giants for the second straight day by the same score, 8 to 1, and moved majestically in the direction of their second straight World Series conquest.

The Yankees gave towering Cliff Melton the same rough treatment this afternoon that they handed to the renowned Carl Hubbell the day before. The only difference was that they got their attack underway quicker and spread it out over three innings, instead of just one. They drove the rookie southpaw from the box in the fifth, routed Harry Gumbert in the sixth, and coasted home comfortably behind the effective pitching of their burly right-hander, Charley (Red) Ruffing.

While the Yankees were blasting an even dozen hits off the combined pitching of Melton, Gumbert and Dick Coffman, Ruffing scattered the Giants' seven hits, struck out eight batsmen, and squelched a last-inning rally in which the Giants filled the bases, with two out.

Ruffing not only registered his first World Series triumph since 1932, meantime making amends for two false starts against the Giants a year ago, but his bat struck the most decisive blows for the World Champions.

Drives in Three Runs.

The big right-hander, most stubborn holdout in the majors last spring after demanding an extra $1,000 for his hitting ability, drove home three of the Yankees' eight runs with a pair of rousing hits. His first blow climaxed the Yankee uprising against Melton in the fifth, drove in what proved to be the winning run, and knocked the gangling southpaw from the box. Ruffing's second hit was a two-bagger against the left field barrier that brought two mates across, in the sixth, and knocked Gumbert off the mound.

The Giants, as in the first game, had taken a one-run lead, produced in the opening frame by Dick Bartell's flukey two-bagger and Mel Ott's single to right, only to have their pitching defense crack up under the explosive power of the Yankee bats.

National League hopes lasted through only four innings this afternoon, one less than the day before. Then came the blow off as the Yankees scored twice in the fifth,

National Loop Idols Have Clay Feet!

By Shirley Povich.

New York, Oct. 7.—Among other things the Yankees are proving in this World Series is that there is something suspiciously clay-like about these National League idols, the Giants. And the evidence is not confined to the fact that the Giants have been able to make only two runs, one of 'em tainted, in the 18 innings the Series has progressed.

POVICH.

The Yankees have not only beaten the Giants' best pitchers and reduced the National Leaguers' batting attack to the next thing to absolute minimum, but they are raising a tremendous doubt about the managerial acumen of Will Terry, the so-called National League genius.

Only twice in this World Series has Terry attempted anything of note along strategical lines and at this writing he has an average of exactly .000 both of his managerial stratagems not only went awry, but seemingly were founded on no less than stupid premises.

The sixth inning today brought forth Terry's worst managerial debacle. It was at a time when the score read only 4 to 1 in favor of the Yankees and the Giants were apparently still in the ball game. At least it was not at the point where the Giants were forced to despair of victory. They had won tougher ball games, as has every other club, when the situation has been even darker than 4 to 1 in the sixth inning.

George Selkirk was on second base after his double and one was out. Tony Lazzeri, right handed hitter was at bat, and Harry Gumbert, the Giant right hander, was pitching. Awaiting his turn in the little circle between the dugout and the batter's box was Charley Ruffing Gumbert's first pitch came sailing toward Lazzeri and it was deliberately wide of the plate. Apparently Terry had ordered his pitcher to walk Tony.

When the significance of that plan dawned upon the customers, a wave of gasps swept the incredulous stands. It was incredible, but it was being done deliberately. Terry was ordering Gumbert to pass Lazzeri in order to pitch to Ruffing.

Well, any Griffith Stadium fan could have told Terry that he was a fool. That one should never pass Lazzeri to pitch to Ruffing. That American League managers had long since learned the folly of that. Lazzeri had made two hits earlier in the proceedings today, it's true, but Ruffing had not been exactly helpless. Among other things he had driven in the run that put the Yankees in a 2-1 lead with a sharp single to left.

Anyway, as I was saying, any American League fan could have told Terry that Ruffing is a more

Kennedy Stops National League Hitters; Bill Herman Hurt.

By William Weekes,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Lloyd Vernon Kennedy choked off the Cubs' heavy artillery with three hits today to conquer the National Leaguers, 3 to 1, and hoist the White Sox to even terms in the second game of Chicago's twenty-second city baseball championship series.

The Cubs' big guns, which yesterday raked Ted Lyons and Bill Dietrich for 15 hits and a 7-to-3 triumph in the opening skirmish, were almost futile against the husky fast baller today. In fact, none of the Cubs' three hits figured in the scoring of their lone run. While Kennedy, who fashioned a no-hit, no-run masterpiece against Cleveland two years ago, was allotting a double to Billy Herman and a pair of singles to Linus Frey, the Sox clipped Curt Davis and Charley Root for nine, five of which were used in the manufacture of runs.

Jimmy Dykes' Sox delighted 9,481 thoroughly chilled fans in Comiskey Park by grabbing the lead in the fourth when Mike Kreevich opened with a single and subsequently scored after another single by Dixie Walker and Rip Radcliff's double. The margin held up until the eighth as Davis, with the aid of sharp fielding, turned back threats in the fifth and sixth.

Hardwick Shifts Navy Line-up

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 7.—Head Coach Hank Hardwick, of the Navy team, has decided upon several changes in the line of the eleven which will start against the University of Virginia here Saturday afternoon. These changes have been indicated during the scrimmages of the present week.

Hardwick will start the regular backfield of Frank Case, Bill Ingram, Allan McFarland and Bob Antrim, but stated that he intends to make considerable use during the game of the second backfield, which made such a good showing against Citadel and has continued its good work in practice this week.

Peace Moves Are Menaced By Yank Guns

By H. I. Phillips.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Yankee Stadium, Oct. 7.—The mystery of this World Series is why the Department of State doesn't interfere.

As long as Washington is denouncing people for "action inconsistent with the principles which should govern human relationships," how can it exempt the Yanks?

What's the difference in the war over there and the war over here anyhow? In both cases it is a matter of cold-blooded murder without a formal declaration of war.

And what makes the Yanks a standout for official disciplinary action by all humanitarians is that they have now come out for standardization of their victories.

They are turning 'em out to a pre-cast and blue-printed score. It was a size 8-to-1 model Wednesday and it was the same size today.

It was all done in the sixth inning Wednesday and most of it in the sixth inning again this afternoon. There is a rumor today that Henry Ford has taken over the direction of the series.

The Yanks departed from the plans a little by giving the Giants their one run sooner than they did in the first game, but this was the only respect in which they departed from the fixed routine.

It is understood the sixth inning will be sponsored hereafter by the National Adding Machines Corporation.

The Ruppert roughnecks started bombing operations in the fifth, but suspended operations after a gain all along the line on rumors that Secretary Hull wanted them on the telephone.

They resumed blasting in the sixth, however, and it was just yesterday's inning done in technicolor.

If a pitcher gets as far as the sixth against the Yankees this year it is par for the distance.

Mountaineer Melton of the Giants was taken out in that inning today just as Hubbell on Wednesday, dazed, groggy and repentant.

It was another cruel demonstration of the fact that baseball and modern warfare know no such word as brother. Melton was once a member of the Yankee team. He slept and ate with them.

Today the Yanks cut out everything but the eating.

Melton had been doing very nicely up to the fatal moment when his old buddies decided nobody has any business fooling around a powder magazine with a blowtorch on the ground of former companionship.

Gumbert and Coffman, Giant pitchers, seem to be on permanent assignment with the ambulance unit in this series. They come rushing to the rescue in all emergencies.

Gumbert evidently just steps in to identify the outlaws and make sure there has been no change in locale or personalities.

Colonials to Face Wesleyans Tonight as Improved Eleven

Team That Crushed Wake Forest Last Week Presents Real 'First' Team, Which Is Labeled Powerful Scoring Machine.

By Bob Garrison.

A smoother, more powerful George Washington eleven than the one that crushed Wake Forest last week in its inaugural will trot out on the pock-marked greensward of Griffith Stadium tonight to have it out with West Virginia Wesleyan. The kick-off is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

The wrinkles and rough spots so evident in the curtain raiser have disappeared to a large extent after a week on the coaching ironing board of Jim Pixlee and his assistants. There may be some new rumples tonight, but they'll be as scarce as Giant World Series victories—the coaches have seen to that.

Tonight also will afford the fans their first glimpse of the real "first" team representing the downtown team. Last week's game was conducted along more or less experimental lines, but the eleven young men designated to start tonight's constitute the pick of the squad.

Yurwitz Starts.

Pete Yurwitz, who gave a sensational performance at end against Wake Forest last week, has been inserted in the regular line-up at left end for Morris, and Ted Cotguard, will start in place of Izzy Tingham, the Colonials' watch-charm Weinberg at right guard tonight. Another notable addition will be Jay Turner at fullback, who played only sparingly last week because of a bad leg.

With him in the backfield will be Bruce Mahan at quarter; Joey Kaufman and Bob Nowasky, halves. A couple of changes have been made in the line, notably at tackle, where Keahey is replacing Shiering. Otherwise the forward wall will be the same. Morris and Berry are scheduled to start at end; Rebholz at the other tackle; Weinberg and Renzaglia, guards, and Hallberg, center.

The Colonials are qutoed at 5 to 2 to take the game, inasmuch as the visitors' scoring punch has been nothing to write home about thus far, while scoring seems to be one of the Pixlee party's strong suits.

BLUEFIELD CAPTURES LAUREL FEATURE RACE

Filly Races To Wire in Photo Finish

W. E. Snyder's Petard Takes Seventh at $10.80 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 7.—The Shandon Farm's Bluefield, a busy filly since arriving in Maryland, fought her way to her first victory of the fall season, taking a thrilling photo decision from Airegla, an odds-on favorite, in today's feature race. The 6-furlong sprint, named the North Beach Purse, drew a field of six and Airegla was bet as if the race had already been run. But after the negative had been consulted by the judges, Bluefield's No. 2 was flashed on the board and the chosen backers sprinted for the win lines to collect a $39.10 mutuel.

Bluefield and Airegla fought it out eight lengths in front of Noticing, a long shot, which came from the rear of the field to close with a rush.

Airegla did the expected by bounding to the front soon after the start, but despite the fact that he had the whole track to chose from, Jockey Joe Renick kept the Bubbling Over filly along the rail, where the going was still seggy and holding. In contrast, Jockey Parke took Bluefield to the center of the oval, where he put her to the whip and she gradually wore down her rival.

The track was rated as heavy, but the sky was clear and 9,000 witnessed the sport. Bluefield's time was a poor 1:15 2-5.

Running in the buggy-horse time of 1:18 2-5 for 6 furlongs, the Brandon Stable's Mintson led 11 other $2,000 selling platers to the wire in the first race to bring his backers a $15.20 mutuel. Affirmation, a field horse, chased the winner most of the way. My Buddy, at 55-1, was third.

Early Brown swept into first position to the surprise of the crowd in the second race, triumphing by a length to the tune of a $44.40 mutuel. Coming up on the outside entering the stretch, Apprentice Jockey A. Clutter drove the filly along and she won by a length from Torquil. Goldspray took third money in the group of ten.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETARD, $10.80, $5.60, $3.60; HAPPY EASTER, $23.70, $8.20; SLEUTH, $3.40.

PETARD, always close to leaders, came around front runners to take lead after a half, but had to be kept to stout drive to save off closing bid of HAPPY EASTER. The latter, forwardly placed, was closing in on winner. SLEUTH walked out of gate, trailed far back for a quarter and gained sharply thereafter.

At The Post

Dear Al,

Among others, my friend Bill Boniface is rather het up about the approximate odds board here. No one questions the honesty or the ability of the men who handle the mutuel department, but the lack of mesh between the final odds posted and the pay off has been definite during the early stages of the meeting here. It virtually is impossible for the auditors to keep up with the late rush of betting which accounts for a 4-5 shot on the board paying an $8.10 mutuel, a 20-1 shot paying $70.10 and an 8-1 shot paying $25.50. The wide range works the other way too and there's going to be a mighty yelp if a 7-2 shot pays $3.40 which is possible under the antiquated system. Two changes would make this track one of the best in the East. The first and most important is the installing of a "tote" so that the odds will correspond with the pay off. Second is the discarding of the electric board which shows the positions of the horses and bringing in a public address system. I don't always like the canned music particularly but the call of the race is a big help to the occasional racegoer. Few fans consult the present contraption. The loud speakers are valuable if only for announcements concerning the race. Havre de Grace can thank its lucky stars that Tommy Daly was on the air when the false start came closing day. Daly's plea caused the boys to pull up. A riot resulted at Thorncliffe under almost similar circumstances when the jockeys rode out the race and the event was run over.

BILL.

First race—Pameiob appears nicely placed in this field and a set of brackets would not surprise me. His race at the Graw was an excellent effort. Ann McGinty runs some good races and should be an important factor. Byrd's Flight to take care of the others.

Second race—Trojan Racket has done fairly well over the fences, and, if ready to run back to that last at Belmont, I'm going to expect a win. Bright Plumage has some class and may be prominent. Tioga to take the others into camp.

Third race—Tutticurie, first on the reserve list, promises to do a lot of running if marched postward. Ran four good ones in New England. Apprehend is fitted for this course and is dangerous. Early Times for the show end.

Fourth race—Despite Night Play's lack of staying power in recent races, I'm going to take this one. This opposition is only fair. Sun Antioch has worked well. Slump, a hot tip last out, is due to be close.

Fifth race—Savage Beauty has plenty of foot and will have to be caught by this group. I'm going to string along. Coronium should go well. My Elsie comes from that stable of fit ones and probably will be a factor.

Seventh race—Sea Gull is in rare form. Both works and races point to the condition of this one. Boosel and Miss Alphonse for the place and show. I'm going to pass up Glowing Coal and wait for Pimlico.

Eighth race—Xandra is reaching top form and won at the other track. Meets a field here that seems built to order. Kievson has been juggled around awaiting a spot and this may be the right one. Albuquerque is getting ready to crack down and may improve.

Best bet—Sea Gull.

Eminent Football Authority.

Pittsburgh's Panthers, Rose Bowl champions, have taken command of the national football lead with a difference-by-score rating of 98.42. The Panthers, gaining prestige with every game, will revenge themselves on the powerful Duquesne eleven this week. The Dukes rated 90.5 desire to mar Pitt's record and are obviously pointing for the Panthers. Pitt also is gunning for Duquesne. A royal battle favoring Pitt results.

Schmidt's Buckeyes fought a great Boilmaker eleven into submission as predicted, thereby gaining a 93.74 rating. Perched in second place, the Ohio State crew has set its eyes on the national crown. The Buckeyes' tour to the West for a battle with the Trojans of Southern California, rated 81.8, may be disastrous. The long trek across the country will not aid the Buckeyes in this battle.

Michigan State's Spartans, coached by the brilliant Charley Bachman and his able assistant, Tom King, outclawed the Wolverines of Big Ten fame by the predetermined difference by score. This win marred Michigan's proud record of never having been beaten four times in a row.

Pennsylvania pounced upon the strong Maryland Terrapins to win, 28-21, in a free scoring contest. This week's opponent, the Yale Bulldog, rated 74.1, is virtually tied with Pennsylvania, rated 74.5.

Post Notes on FISHING

By Bill Ackerman.

It has been said, and rightly, that once a blue-fisherman always a blue-fisherman. Certainly these anglers never give up hope of getting one more chance at their scrappy antagonists, and that is just what they are, for we have never run across any fisherman who has really gotten in them that does not extend the palm for being the best that we have in northern waters.

ACKERMAN

From early spring, with trips of several hundred miles, they reach for any opportunity to get a crack at them, and all through the summer continue to fish the regular grounds with the hope that they might be the lucky ones to get in them first.

With that run of big fellows that we had for several weeks last month around Sharps Island, the blue fishermen were as excitable as 6-year-olds and wore a path to the boats that fish this section—and now because of the lull, or is it that they have gone on to warmer climes, they are still waiting, hoping and continuing to give them a try.

Some baymen insist that they are gone for this season, others place the blame on the weather and try to prove by doin's of other years that the best fishing is still ahead of us. Everyone seems to have their own pet theories and swell alibies for their refusal to strike and reasons why they should be fished this way or that.

When you come right down to brass tacks, no knows just what the answer is. True, that they have been known to stay until late November and equally true that some years have seen them gone before this. As far back as we can remember, no two years have ever been exactly alike. What we do know is this—if ever, now is the time to give them a whirl—trolling or chumming and either on the bottom, the top or at any level which coincides with your own pet theories. Eveyerone of them work at some time or another and at certain times, as last year in the same section, anything and everything works. Another few weeks and we can given you definite assurance that it is no use to go after them because then they will be gone.

* * * *

The rock and trout still continue to strike at Piney Point and around the Herring Bay section, and even boats on the run across to the mouth of the Choptank have gotten in them for real catches, with, of course, the exception of the few bad days in the week.

A call to Ed Bowen at Solomons yesterday showed that they are now having better finishing than at any time this year. The average catch per boat is around 60 and of everything that swims—blues, trout, rock hardheads and spot. All fair sized fish and caught bottom fishing.

* * * *

It is remarkable, the large sized fish that have been taken this year, both from bay and river. More than one rock that we have seen, even when head and tail, pushed close to the 15-pound maximum limit. Those in the 8 and 10 pounds class were common.

We have sent on to Preston, Md., the entry made out on the Fishing Fair blank of the 9-pound rock, caught by Mrs. G. Branam, of 2626 South Dakota avenue, while fishing with Capt. L. M. Spriggs at Piney Point.

The most unusual catch of the week was that of the 47-pound channel bass by James J. Cotter, of 2801 Twenty-fifth street northeast, at Sharps Island. A real fish even when caught on bass grounds, which the Chesapeake Bay isn't.

dangerous batter these days than the ageing Lazzeri. American League managers contrive to keep Ruffing away from the plate, not bring him up there. But that is what Terry did, and as you know he paid through the nose. Because Ruffing promptly socked the hardest swat of the day—a two bagger against the left field fence that drove in two more.

And the day before Terry hadn't distinguished himself, either. That was in the Yankees' big sixth inning when the Giants were trailing only 2 to 1. The Yankees had the bases full, none were out and Bill Dickey was at bat. At that time, Terry was not content to permit the Yankees to score only one more run out of the proceedings. Any American League manager would gladly have settled for one more Yankee run in those circumstances. The possibilities were entirely too sinister.

* * * *

But Terry took the long chance. He did not order his field to play back and try for what would be a certain double-play if the slow-footed Dickey hit a ground ball. No, indeed, he did not. He ordered his infield to play close in and thus tried to cut off a run at the plate. The result? Dickey's ground ball, which normally would have been an easy double-play, stopped through the drawn-in infield of the Giants and two large Yankee runs crossed the plate.

3 High School Teams To See Action Today

By Jack Munhall.

The scholastic football season reaches a new peak of activity today as no less than six local elevens swing into action on the heaviest card of the young season.

Three games are scheduled for the city and a trio will be played out of town. Locally, the debut of Woodrow Wilson in the inter-high school football series against Roosevelt in the Roosevelt Stadium at 3:30 p. m. figures to lure the brightest spotlight. Vying for interest in the traditional Eastern-St. John's clash at Eastern Stadium and the meeting of St. Alban's School with Boy's Latin School on the former's field.

While these teams are enjoying the comforts of home, another trio ventures from the city. Gonzaga, in its first start since dramatically nipping Central, 6 to 0, in the opening game of the season, travels to Baltimore to meet Loyola.

Friends School journeys to Port Deposit, Md., to invade the stronghold of Tome Institute and Bullis draws the toughest task of any, that of halting the powerful Washington & Lee eleven in its Ballston, Va., bailiwick.

The results of these games will go a long way toward elarifying the local football situation as to the relative merits of the District of Columbia aggregations.

The Wilson-Roosevelt game brings together a puzzling pair of clubs. The Presidents, presenting only the second football squad in the school's history, appear no stronger than the 1936 edition. Coach Carl Heintel lost many of the players who helped make last season a successful one.

But Coach Lynn Woodworth has a few lads over at Roosevelt, who, no doubt, will attempt to make the going anything but easy for the freshman invader. The Rough Riders are certain to be more advanced than they were in the opening game when the strong Bullis team won a 28-0 victory. Woodworth has a staple nucleus in six letter men back from last year and who are improved in their performances this season.

Especially prominent in this group are Fred Mundy, a back, who showed up well against Bullis, Capt. Ed Vasvary, a crack defensive guard, and Joe Kolker, a tackle. Also depended on are John Brennan, Dutch Holland and Joe Fraber.

The Eastern-St. John's game is a difficult one to analyze. The Lincoln Parkers have improved steadily but may be fatigued from a hard-fought battle with Central Tuesday. St. John's has not yet played a game but reports are circulating that Coach Gene Augustefer has assembled a capable representative in his first year as the cadet mentor.

The Johnnies will take the field with a veteran team but one which will be greatly outweighed. Back from last year are Jim Geibel, an all-prep end; Joe Neuland, also experienced on the flank, and Elby Barrett, 185-pound center, to lead the line. The backfield is well-fortified by the return of Joe Gallagher, quarterback, and three experienced halfbacks, Bill O'Connor, Bap Battiste and Frank Cady.

Eastern on the basis of its plan of attack against Central and Episcopal will look to Quarterback Bill Kemp and Fullback Al Kidwell to carry the mail. Dick Wade, a sure pass receiver, and Jack Kearney afford the Capitol Hill team good protection at the end posts and the rest of the line also shapes up well.

Orrel Mitchell's Gonzaga Club enters the Loyola fray without the services of its ace quarterback, Bill Gardiner, who fractured his collar bone in a scrimmage last week. However, he is the only casualty and other outstanding backs as Jim Ellis, Jim Shaw and Louis Difilipo will be on hand.

Friends' light eleven faces a stern test in Tome, usually very dangerous. The local squad will average less than 150 pounds but appears better than the team that was unable to win a single game last year. The stars are Cliff Wannan, fleet, hard-running halfback, in the backfield and Kenyon Coleman and Dick Jones, at ends; Capt. Bill Myers at tackle and Oliver McKee at center.

St. Alban's, fresh from an opening triumph over Wilson by a 12-6 score, collide with Boys' Latin, confident that their backfield aces, Jack Dunn 3d and Jack Williams, will again run wild. Bill Beeler and Marshal or Jaeger will complete the starting backfield.

Georgetown Entrains for Worcester

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With the strains of "Alma Mater" and cheers of their classmates ringing in their ears, a happy-go-lucky squad of Georgetown gridmen last night entrained for Worcester, Mass., where tomorrow they are scheduled to resume a feud that has lain dormant since the halcyon days of 1922.

Head Coach Jack Hagerty, addressing a monstrous pep rally staged on the campus prior to the team's departure, promised to bring home the winner's share of spoils and to show the "Cross" a brand of football it hasn't encountered since its last meeting with the Hoyas. There was an undercurrent of tenseness and determination among the players that forebode no good for the big Purple eleven.

Clara Wins Rassle Bout After Fight

'World's Champion' Mat Star Helps Pack 'Arnica Hall.'

Two girls dolled up as if for a pleasant evening.

On their way from the dressing room, they passed across a ringed mat at Turner's arena last night, and Clara Mortensen, "women's wrestling champion" from California proceeded to absorb a complete massage and shampooing from a brunette named Maria Gardina, from Texas, before pinning the little spitfire in 13 minutes.

The ladies passed through just before Dean Detton and Billy Hanson turned the mat into a maelstrom of flying bodies that left the ring 11 times, and hurled themselves to a 29 minute fall that found Detton on top.

But the girls! The little brunette from Texas, Maria, drew the cheers as she clambered in garbed in a brilliant scarlet robe, and fooled the audience by looking demurely at Clara. Miss Mortensen demured back in a baby blue robe.

Clara didn't like the way Maria had her hair curled in back, and proceeded to bring the curls as far front as possible by standing on the second strand of rope and pulling with a clenched fist.

Miss Gardina applied a manicure to the Mortensen fingers after twisting Clara's arm between her legs. It was hard on Maria's make-up, and Maria sort of lost her head and slapped Clara in the mouth. Then the fight started.

Lunch Fund Fight Card Is Complete

Turner and Ahearn, promoting the school free luncheon boxing show at Griffith Stadium Monday, October 18, in co-operation with the Citizen's Committee, yesterday completed their card, which has Danny London, of New York, against Lou Gevinson, of Washington, and Cowboy Howard Scott against Irish Johnny Dean in double-star bouts.

Two youngster who never have shown before—Al Reid, a New York Jewish scrapper, Armando Sicilia, promising Italian fighter from Chicago—were signed up for 6-round matches.

Reid was matched aginst Ray Ingram, the blond Washington boy, who until Joey Archibald crossed paths with him, was the eighth ranking featherweight in the country. That was on the Police show last June, but Ray is under new management these days, and is confident of making a spirited comeback.

Sicilia will make his bow against Baby Manuel, the good looking Mexican boy, whose record shows a keen victory over Henry Armstrong and other topnotchers.

The curtain-raising six-round bout finds George Abrams, local middleweight who has won eight straight since emerging from the simon-purse ranks, opposing one Harry Kersey, of Jacksonville.

In Reid the local promoters secured a youngster who this season scored in top bouts over such fighters as Johnny Pena, Joey Wach, Young Jack Sharkey, Nicky Jerome and Frankie Martin. His victories have stamped him as the coming featherweight.

There will be 38 rounds on the card. Matchmaker Ahearn today is scouting around for available colored heavyweights, who will take mass flights in a battle royal—the first to be put on this season.

Meantime plenty of tickets are being sold by the policemen and firemen. Inspector Kelly, in charge of the police, yesterday requested 1,000 reserved seat tickets from Promoter Turner, claiming his men have had orders for them and will sell them in a hurry. Some idea of the speed with which the men are working is evidenced by the sale of $200 worth of tickets by Eighth Precinct just a few hours after they received the tickets.

Tickets also may be procured at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W, and at Goldie Ahearn's, Ninth and E streets.

'Red' Ruffing Literally Surrounds Giants as Yankees Win by 8 to 1

pitchers—Cliff Melton and Harry Gumbert—from the box. But, to be specific, it was Ruffing who sent both of his pitching rivals to the showers. Big Charley moved young Melton right off the premises with his single in the fifth inning, and it was his double against Gumbert in the sixth that convinced Manager Bill Terry that the continued presence of Gumbert was inimical to the best interests of the Giants.

Today, like the day before, the Giants raised a slew of false hopes as, during the early innings, the Yankees failed to organize their batting attack. Young Cliff Melton, the lop-eared rookie from Baltimore, who, with the proper scarecrow outfit, would look like a fugitive from the corn patch, was apparently defying all World Series tradition with a seemingly winning performance in his World Series debut. Because, let it be remembered no freshman pitcher has ever won a World Series game in the 33 years of series history.

Giants Give Melton Lead.

The Giants set young Melton up in a 1-0 lead in the first inning and the rookie lefthander, a gum-chewing gawk with a side-arm delivery, threw nothing but dismay at the Yankees for four innnigs. A single by Tony Lazzeri in the third inning, another by Joe DiMaggio in the fourth, had been the extent of the Yanks' damage to Melton.

And then came the fifth. Today the Yankees, who had laid waste to the Giants in the sixth inning the day before, were one inning ahead of schedule. Myril Hoag swatted a two-bagger into rightfield and the Yankee attack that was to reach 12-hit proportions, had begun.

Despite Melton's clever work for four innings, an unmistakable feeling that it couldn't last pervaded the grandstands. Hadn't they seen the great Hubbell go down before that slugging Yankee crew after pitching five scoreless innings the day before? Well, that double by Hoag which led off the fifth might well be the start of another Yankee barrage.

It was, like the rattle of castanets, base hits that started bouncing off Yankee bats. Melton, the master of the early innings, was a helpless figure when the Yankees began to fire in earnest. And it was the bottom of the Yankee batting order, whose strength is concentrated in the middle, that chased Melton from the mound.

Outfielder George Selkirk did not dilly nor dally after Hoag's double that launched that fifth. Into rightfield he slammed a clean single that sent Hoag scurrying across the plate with the tying run; the rout of the Giants was on.

The ancient Tony Lazzeri took up the cudgel for the Yanks at this point and into leftfield he drove a single that pushed Selkirk to second. Now it was the turn of Ruffing, the pitcher, who never needed a pinch hitter. And he didn't fail. A clean single bit into the dust between Shortstop Bill Bartell and Third Baseman Mel Ott, skipped merrily into leftfield, and Selkirk raced home with the run that set the Yanks up in a 2-to-1 lead.

And it drove Melton out of the box. In came right-handed Harry Gumbert, another graduate of Baltimore, to take up the pitching for the Giants and quell, momentarily, the uprising of the Yankees.

But an inning later, Gumbert got his. Four Yankee hits were sprayed to every section of the field and four Yankee runs crossed the plate, to boost their lead to 6-2, and with Ruffing out there turning back the Giants inning by inning, placed the game beyond reclaim.

Gehrig Gets Single.

Lou Gehrig touched off that sixth-nning barrage with a single that Mel Ott intercepted, but couldn't hold. Bill Dickey banged a single to center and Gehrig, playing it safely, stopped at second. The attack lapsed when First Baseman Johnny McCarthy, with a clever pick-up and throw on Hoag's attempted sacrifice bunt, forced Gehrig at third, but it was only a reprieve for Gumbert.

Because big Selkirk drove a ball so fiercely at First Baseman McCarthy that it rocketed off McCarthy's foot before the infielder could get his hand down and bounded into short rightfield for a freak two-bagger. Dickey and Hoag scored before Jimmy Ripple could return the ball to the plate.

Then, the Giants' strategy went awry. Manager Terry ordered Gumbert to pass Lazzeri and pitch to Ruffing. That was an insult that Ruffing could not, did not, ignore. Then it was that Ruffing produced the most authoritative swat of the day. He stepped into Gumbert's first pitch, sent a two-bagger crashing over Moore's head against the low leftfield wall and Selkirk and Lazzeri were home with two more Yankee runs.

Even as his hit in the inning before had driven Melton from the box, Ruffing's double in the sixth moved Gumbert off the scene for the Giants and Dick Coffman finished out the inning.

Coffman got his, too. He got it in the seventh when the Yanks applied the finishing touches after DiMaggio had singled to center and Gehrig had walked. Dickey scored DiMaggio with a single to center and Hoag scored Gehrig from third with a long fly to Chiozza.

All of this time Ruffing was by no means confining his duties to his hitting. He was pitching some masterful ball for the Yankees. That 1 run he did give the Giants—in the first inning—was a tainted, luck-anointed affair that spawned from Bartell's fluckey two-bagger which dropped in short left field just out of the combined grasps of Hoag and Crosetti. Mel Ott drove the run home with a single to right.

But even in that one inning that he permitted the Gaints to score, Ruffing was not without his triumph. Because the three Giant outs of the inning were all strikeouts, with Moore, Ripple and McCarthy the victims.

After that, eight superb innings of pitching by Ruffing set in against the Giants. Only four men reached second base against Ruffing from the first inning to the ninth as the Giants swung in vain against his baffling fast ball. When Moore led off the eighth with a double, Ruffing permitted him to advance no farther. When they filled the bases on singles by Chiozza and Whitehead and Pinchhitter Leslie's walk with two out in the ninth, Ruffing sealed his victory by disposing of Moore on a tame grounder to Crosetti.

Ruffing was pretty good.

TroikaOpening Tuesday With Paris Talent

By Chanticleer

Helen Hamilton announces Tuesday night as the gala occasion on Connecticut avenue when her Club Troika swings open its doors for its sixth Washington season. It's a toss-up whether to go into the rich outlay of new talent this year first—or remind Washingtonians of last year's friends who will be back.

Vera Verega, a newcomer, at least is the piece de resistance of the new Troika shows. She is a contralto, playing her own accompaniments on harp or accordion. And she comes direct to Washington from an engagement at the San Stephano in Cairo and has scored successes in Paris' Russian clubs.

Gypsy Bokal, singer and dancer also known in the better Paris night spots, also is a newcomer to Washington. She has appeared in pictures, however, with both Pola Negri and Dolores Del Rio. Dena Larena and her brother Zena also take their places in the company as vocalists. Zena has just arrived (in the nick of time, it would seem) from Shanghai.

From last season we'll welcome Sasha Bartnovsky and his orchestra and Emil Wadimoff, master of ceremonies and producer of those delightful Troika sketches. Orlik and Lolik, the Troika's lovely dance team, also will be on hand for the opening week.

Better phone your reservation.

Boulevard Farms promises another innovation before the month is over. It will be Menagerie Night—with honest-to-goodness live animals on display. And a lot of humor to keep things from becoming too realistic. Watch for it. . . . A young man came to the Mayfair the other day and said he was just the man they were looking for. He had seen an ad in The Post which was supposed to be taken not too literally. It called for a good-looking young man and his girl friend to occupy booth No. X in the Mayfair that night!

Luncheon and cocktail hours are busy ones at the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room. In other words, there's plenty to do at this grand spot at other times of the day than the supper dancing hours. If you get a telephone call in the Pall Mall Room, they just plug the phone into the wall at your table. . . . A nice spot for good drinks—the King Cole Room at the Claridge. . . . It's a Sidney unit now on the bandstand at Brinkley's, the Southeast gathering point.

Hear ye, the rendezvous of K street is to be open again next week. Thursday night is the exact date. Glamour and romance. That's the Shoreham's new Blue Room atmosphere. Very modern key in soft lights and plenty of color contrasts. The Shoreham Revue continues to attract the musicomedy fans, two shows nightly. . . . A fast-moving show is on view at the Lotus this week, with Harry and George in dance poems and a St. Louis Blues; Sharpe and Kirk, the two loose screws; Joey Dean, whirlwind hoofer, and Earl Lindsay's Girls in a variety of steps. Bill Strickland and orchestra for your dancing.

It's no longer idle rumor, but actual fact, that all night clubs and hotels are agreeing that the Halloween celebrations at the local spots will be held not on October 30 but on Monday, November 1. The managers and owners in question agree that with the liquor laws being what they are on Saturday nights, the 30th being just a few hours too early for the would-be celebrants, pay day, etc., and the fact that it would prove a difficult job to handle the regular Saturday night goer-outers and the holiday celebrants in addition. All this would prove too much for one night.

Court Holds Up 3 U. S. Loans to Electrify Cities

District's New Three-Judge Body Restrains Erection of Local Plants.

Three temporary injunctions to power companies that complained of pending "unconstitutional Federal grants" to municipalities for the erection of competing power plants were granted yesterday by the District's first three-judge court, impanelled to speed up court work here.

In another action before Justice Daniel O'Donoghue, the Rural Electrification Administration gained a temporary victory over the Alabama Power Co., when the judge refused to issue an injunction prohibiting the granting of a loan of $310,000 to DeKalb and Calhoun counties, Alabama. The counties planned to use the money for the erection of a power-distribution system to be hooked up with the TVA.

The three-judge court is composed of Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, of the District Court, and Associate Justices D. Lawrence Groner and Justin Miller, of the United States Court of Appeals. The three injunctions are effective until the United States Supreme Court rules on the Alabama Power Co. case.

15 Days Must Elapse.

The injunctions temporarily were granted to the Northwestern Public Service Co., which complained of a proposed loan of $220,000 and a grant of $180,000 to the town of Columbus, Nebr.; the Lake Superior District Power Co., which fought a loan of $103,000 and a grant of $84,500 to Bessemer, Wis., and the Arkansas-Missouri Power Co., which asked a ban on a loan of $39,000 and a grant of $32,735 to the town of Thayer, Mo. By the terms of the injunctions, the PWA and other Federal units may not advance the funds until 15 days after the Supreme Court rules on the Alabama power case.

In refusing to issue a restraining injunction against the REA, Justice O'Donoghue said the co-operative agreement in the three Alabama counties would fill a need for electrical facilities in many places, and that, in view of this, he could not approve charges of illegal competition.

Citizens Refused Power.

REA officials said rural citizens of the three counties formed the Cherokee Country Electric Membership Corporation after numerous refusals by the power company to make its product available to them. Already $157,234 Federal money has been advanced to the co-operative.

It was anounced that an especial appeal would be asked by the Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson, & Shorb law firm, which handled both court proceedings, to block the granting of additional funds on the grounds the co-operative was competing with existing facilities in an unfair manner through the use of Federal grants.

Bishop Frowns On Coughlin for Roosevelt Slur

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 7.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's first utterance on current public questions since the Archdiocese of Detroit was created drew from his new Archbishop tonight the comment that he used "unfortunate words."

Archbishop Edward Mooney, writing in the Michigan Catholic, referred to the Royal Oak priest's statement in a press interview that President Roosevelt showed "personal stupidity" in appointing Justice Hugo Black to the Supreme Court.

The Archbishop said he felt "called upon to state publicly" that Father Coughlin's remarks were not "submitted for review to me or to some one appointed by me."

Priests May Disagree.

"Priests have the right to disagree with the President," Archbishop Mooney wrote, "and they may feel the duty of publicly expressing such disagreement, especially in matters of high moral import. But a deeply inculcated respect for authority, as well as a consciousness of the reverence with which their own sacred calling is regarded always makes them, on reflection, impose upon themselves a fine sense of restraint in the language they use."

The archbishop added:

"I should perhaps add an expression of my own deep regret that, in editing this statement (the interview), Father Coughlin did not have the prudent counsel of a friendly critic which it is the aim of church legislation to provide.

No Quarrel With C. I. O.

"I am confident that he would thus have been kept from using, even unwittingly, an analogy which might leave with the ordinary reader the impression that there is a basic opposition in principle between the Catholic Church and the C. I. O."

Christian, Ex-Aide To Harding, Nearly Blind in Hospital

Blind in one eye and with vision gravely impaired in the other, George B. Christian, jr., one-time secretary and intimate friend to President Harding, is in Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital here, The Post learned yesterday.

The man who had perhaps the shortest tenure of all White House secretaries, since Harding died in his second year in office, makes his home at 2734 Cortland place and for the past three months has been connected with the United States Constitutional Sesquicentennial Commission.

Born next door to the Harding home at Marion, Ohio, Christian left his business to come to Washington in 1915 as secretary to the then Senator Harding. He served in that capacity for six years, then moved to the White House when his friend was elected President. The latter's death led to Christian's resignation in August, 1923, and in January of the following year he was appointed by President Coolidge to the Federal Trade Commission. The Senate balked at confirmation, however, and the President withdrew the nomination at the request of Mr. Christian.

19-Year-Old Giant Sues Medical Society for Libel

Chicago, Oct. 6 (AP).—Robert P. Wadlow, 8-foot 6-inch giant whose height has been called the greatest on authentic record, filed a $150,000 libel suit against the American Medical Association today. The towering Alton, Ill., youth—he's 19 years old and weighs 425 pounds—claimed an article in the association's journal held him up to ridicule and caused him "great mental anguish." The suit contended he "has been brought into public scandal, ridicule and disgrace."

Wheat Prices Topple 5 Cents In Sales Wave

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Wheat prices crashed to the lowest levels since July, 1936, during a final hour stop loss selling wave. The five cents a bushel drop was limited only by exchange rules prohibiting a greater fall in any single session.

Selling of wheat was attributed to reports of rain in southern sections of the Argentina wheat belt, large Russian shipments to Great Britain and the continent and lagging export demand for North American grain. Persistent liquidation was believed to have originated in eastern sources as houses usually representing these interests were active sellers. The price decline touched off general stop loss selling which engulfed the pit in the final half hour.

Total for National, State Is 1.6 Billion Above Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Oct. 7.—The resources of the Nations banks were placed today at almost $70,000,000,000. The figure was disclosed in the annual report of R. N. Sims, secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks.

He said that as of June 30, 1937, State banks had total resources of $38,644,777,035.25 and national banks $30,337,071,000, the combined total being $1,676,256,808 above last year.

The figures for State banks were compiled by Sims from reports furnished by heads of State banking departments and data for national banks were obtained from the report of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Sims placed the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the 10,453 State banks at $4,652,500,312.97 and 5,299 national banks at $3,050,113,000. The combined totals were $213,279,948 above last year.

Deposits in State banks were $33,028,207,587.05 and in national banks $26,765,913,000, or $1,320,404,629 above last year. Bonds, stocks and securities held by State banks were valued at $15,366,391,554.34 and national banks at $12,122,287,000.

There were 169 fewer State banks and 75 less national banks this year than last.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stock Prices Close Lower; Commodities Weak; U. S. Bonds Irregular.

New York, Oct. 7.—Commodities were weak, especially grains, but stocks and bonds recovered. The United States bond section was irregular, but the lighter weights did better. Stocks were poorer at the close than during the greater part of the day. Sales ran down to 1,250,000 shares. Francs held steady. December wheat closed 5 cents lower at 101¼ cents a bushel.

Opening prices for stocks were lower in mose cases. Steel began 1¾ points down and so did Bethlehem. Numerous other active issues started with losses of a point or more, but there were no delayed dealings, as was the case yesterday, nor were there many large blocks. The rally soon began and at its peak Steel well before noon had climbed to 75⅜, nearly 4 points above the low. Other advances were considerable, that of Allied Chemical amounting to about half a dozen points and of Deere to 4 points.

Morning gains were chipped in the afternoon, but enough were held to give the market an irregularly higher close. Short covering of a leisurely nature and some investment buying engendered by the low prices appeared, while margin selling was said to have slackened. Trading was especially light in the last hour, until near the close, and the ticker had stopping spells.

The steel and metal groups again made up most of the market, but more attention was given the chemicals, where gains of 1 to 4 points were common. Railroad shares were kept in the fractional class. Farm implements paid little attention to the break in grain prices. Farm stocks were shoved up 3 to 5 points. Some of the motor stock recovery was not held to the close.

New Spending.

Wall Street's current rumor regarding the intentions of President Roosevelt on a war program naturally has no more solid basis of fact than any guess on what President Roosevelt ever intended to do ever has had. No one knows, and no one ever will know for more than a few minutes in advance, what the President will do. Just the same, with a special session of Congress, a sudden request for an appropriation of two billions—more or less—for rearmament would fit into the general layout to a nicety.

Such a war program would seem to give point to the President's recent admonition to the other dictator governments in Europe and Asia. He might think it a snappy comeback to the derision with which the Japs have received his warning and to the venom poured into the roundabout and unofficial German replies. It would raise more dust to obscure certain recent inconveniences, as the Supreme Court appointment, the business recession, and the bad decline in securities and commodity markets. It would enable the New Deal government to continue without too much obvious show of sheer waste that huge spending program begun years ago, but which now seems to be running out.

A heavy expenditure for rearmament might give another fillip to business; in fact, the mere prospect of the thing probably would cause some revival of speculative buying of metals and other commodities. It could be argued that the inevitable depression at least could be postponed until after another election. Taxpayers might be expected to kick less vigorously to paying for real guns for the Navy than for toy guns for use on WPA theatrical "projects." Were any such program undertaken, the remaining doubts about an inflationary bust as the ultimate solution of our problem would be removed.

If this country's wordy stand against warlike nations is to be followed by rearmament or means that we are drifting toward war, the wheat market gave no sign of feeling that way about it. Perhaps the market supposed the most likely early development, if any, would be a neutrality declaration, which naturally would tend to reduce our exports of wheat as well as of everything else. Customarily wheat prices rise on war scares.

Trading in wheat futures in Chicago uncovered a bearish condition and by early afternoon prices had dropped to the 5-cent a bushel limit permitted for a single day's dealings. Other grains also weakened and cotton was unsteady. Whatever the cause for wheat's decline the fall in prices for grain and other farm products will provide any additional excuse which the President thinks he may need for calling a special session at which the farm price control program will be considered.

If wheat and cotton continue to fall the pressure on Congress to reenact in some form the old processing taxes—as hinted recently by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace—will increase, for it just does not seem to be on the cards for consumers to be provided with cheaper food.

First to Report.

Woodward Iron Co., although not listed on the exchanges, apparently takes the honors as the first important industrial company to report profits for the third quarter. Net income was a little better in the third period than the average for the first two quarters.

Lower Commissions.

Ironically enough, after sweating through the summer dullness over the matter of lifting commission rates to offset the low sales volume, brokers find that the market, now that it has risen to a sales volume profitable to all concerned, has in effect reduced the commission rates. The reduction in amounts collected because of the lower selling prices run into considerable sums. Selling above 100 the commission for a deal in 100 shares of Steel, Bethlehem and Chrysler, for instance, was $25. Chrysler is now in the $20 class. Steel and Bethlehem are in the $17.50 area. Such active stocks as General Electric, International Nickel and General Motors lately have paid commissions at the rate of $15 a hundred, against the $17.50 charge which had been in effect for many months.

Street Talk.

Revere Brass A shares sold for the first time in several weeks and found the price territory unfamiliar. A fall of 30 points was recorded. . . . General Motors will publish tomorrow its monthly report on sales. The report should show a gain over a year ago.

Revere Copper Drops To $42 From $72.87

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—A sale was concluded in the stock exchange today of 200 shares of Revere Copper & Brass "A" at $42 a share, off $30.87 from the previous transaction in the third week of August. During the greater part of this period other more active shares have been declining steadily.

Excess Funds Up 30 Million

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that the supply of lendable bank funds climbed $30,000,000 during the week ended October 6 to $1,090,000,000.

These funds of member banks in the reserve system, commonly termed "excess reserves" have been on the upward trend since mid-September, primarily as a result of a new credit-easing program, drafted by the Reserve Board and the Treasury.

The increase in excess reserves during the week ended October 6 was traceable to a $64,000,000 decline in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks. Part of the funds withdrawn from the reserve institutions presumably flowed into the commercial banking structure.

Money in circulation increased $49,000,000 during the week to $6,569,000,000. This increase tended to reduce banks' supplies of idle funds and partially offset the Treasury's withdrawal of balances from the reserve banks.

Cost of Food Rises 28.6% In Five Years

Meats Lead Advance With a 46.9% Gain Since 1932.

By the Associated Press.

It costs exactly 28.6 per cent more to feed a family now than it did five years ago, the Labor Deparument said yesterday. Department statisticians reported meat prices led the increase, jumping 46.9 per cent over comparative figures for 1932.

They took the 1923-25 three-year average to get a comparison with normal times. With this average as 100, food prices rose generally from 66.7 on September 15, 1932 to 85.8 last September 14. The butcher's charges leaped from 75.8 to 111.4.

In the last two years dairy products rose 14.5 per cent and meat increased 8.5 per cent as the general level of foodstuffs increased 7 per cent.

The department said that the average price of sliced bacon last September 14—44.9 cents a pound—was 90 per cent higher than in 1932 and almost 10 per cent higher than last year.

The statistics showed that pork chops, figured at 41.2 cents a pound, cost 69.5 per cent more than in 1932 and were 4.5 per cent up from last year.

Other increases over 1932 prices were sirloin steaks, 36.5 per cent; round steak, 41.7 per cent; rib roast, 42.7 per cent; chuck roast, 49.5 per cent; sliced ham, 48.3 per cent; leg of lamb, 34.5 per cent; roasting chickens, 47.8 per cent.

Butter cost 49.1 per cent more last month than in 1932, cheese was up 20.7 per cent, and delivered fresh milk was 20 per cent higher.

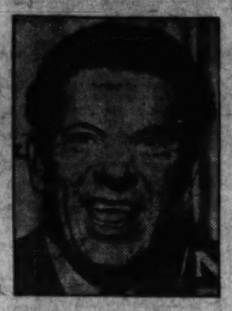
PLYM

Bob Burns Says—



My Uncle Slug use'ta gamble every Saturday night, but he thought he was foolin' everybody and also clearin' his own conscience by goin' to church on Sunday mornin'.

One Sunday he went to church after bein' out all night, and he went sound asleep and dreamed he was back up in Jim Purdy's place with the boys playin' cards. It just happened that that mornin' Deacon Moffit couldn't find the contribution plate, so when the preacher called upon him to take up the collection the deacon used his hat.

When he got around to Uncle Slug, Aunt Bercie nudged him to wake him up and when Uncle Slug opened his eyes and saw the deacon standin' there holdin' a hat out in front of him, he says, "All right, I'll go, but that ain't my hat—mine's got a blue linin'."

The First Tree.

You've certainly heard of the Government's shelter-belt project, those strips of trees they are placing through the Middle West to temper the winds that erode the lands and to hold such moisture as there is out there. You may have thought it very fine or very futile (according to your political or scientific leaning), or you mays have dismissed it as a thought too technical to involve one ounce of human interest.

PHILLIPS.

Talk half an hour to George R. Phillips, of the Forestry Service here, and you'll hear the monotonous prairie winds blow and catch more color than you ever thought a technical project could hold. Phillips, 27, and an easy smiler, doesn't search out the human interest for you; he just keeps talking and it leaks out.

He didn't seem aware of it when he said: "I planted the first tree in the shelter belt, and now there are 44,178,000 trees in six States—the two Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas."

* * * *

Last summer Phillips chanced back on the H. E. Curtis farm, near Lake Creek, in southwest Oklahoma and saw the first tree. It had grown knee high. The first tree is an Austrian pine, and it was placed in the earth by Phillips when he was the State forester for Oklahoma, on March 18, 1935. Ceremony surrounded the planting; the county commissioners, the county agent and civic leaders saw it well done.

Of course, Forester Phillips does not agree with Intellectual Mencken regarding the landholders of that sun and wind-blistered area. He found most of the farmers out there hard-working, serious battlers with a poor land—but he does view the scene in all of its realities, deploring the one-crop system and hoping the farmers may some day accept 100 per cent the economic views of agriculture's scientists.

He feels that if they husband their forests and lands realistically, they can have a balanced economy and believes that sooner or later they will realize that you can't chop down all the timber and expect a standing crop when the next season comes. He figures there will have to be considerable educational work.

* * * *

He found the farmers agreeable enough to the Shelter Belt undertaking. The farmers had been figuring that "we have a lot of trouble with land washing," and they felt that nothing could be done about it. They figured it out that way when a 13-inch rain fell once and within three days had washed a gulley 100 feet wide, 50 feet deep and 3 miles long. The farmers were convinced of hopelessness when they saw 88 tons of soil wash off an acre within a year.

And statistics may have leaked in on the large number of insanity cases among the prairie women. Psychiatrists attributed it to the landscape's monotony, partially. Trees are relieving things.

So the farmers, generally, took to the idea of the Shelter Belt. A few of them had even experimented with the idea, on their own initiative. All of them knew what trees were worth out there; they meant existence almost. There are cases in court records of men convicted for stealing trees, not for their sale value but for fuel.

The forester recalled one case of a ranch owner who permitted a poor family to chop a nice row of cottonwoods so they might have wood for fuel. And at the rate the trees were being cut several years ago, something approaching a fuel crisis might have arisen, it was thought.

Phillips is deep in the theoretical side of the project, is full of the facts and figures of it. But he couldn't help turning, to say how pleased he was when a mourning dove began building its nest in a tree the day it was planted.

Thumbnail biography: Phillips was born on a farm in northern New Jersey; was graduated from Michigan State College with a degree in forestry; spent a year with the Land Economics Survey in Michigan; went to Indiana as assistant State forester; then moved to Oklahoma to become the first forester of that State. There, he was authorized by the State to cooperate with the Federal Forestry Service, and on July 1, 1936, joined the Federal employ.

Joseph H. B. Evans, administrative assistant, F. C. A., will address the United Government Employes, Inc., on "Automatic Promotions in Federal Government" at 7:30 o'clock this evening in the Garnett-Patterson Junior High School. The committee, header by George H. Wallace, will give the final plans for the anniversary and celebration week of November 14.

Government workers will be told how a large industrial concern handles its administrative problems in an address to be given by Richard S. Uhrbrock before the Agriculture Graduate School course in administrative management at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Uhrbrock is personnel chief of a large nationally known commercial concern. Dr. A. F. Woods, the school director, reports that enrollment in the administrative class approaches 300. Practically every bureau in the Department of Agriculture and 23 other departments and Government agencies are represented.

Officials Deny U. S. Will Lead 9-Power Action Against Japan

State Department Scouts Report Treaty Signers Will Meet in Capital, Hints League Must Take Initiative; Roosevelt Back to Map Policy.

"I do not believe under the circumstances now obtaining that a conference under the Nine-Power Treaty will be conducive to peace. It should not be forgotten that, while we are conferring under the Nine-Power Treaty, that will be justification for certain other countries conferring under the unwritten treaty of national interest.

"We should not overlook the fact either that the nations anxious to have us do our duty in China are equally anxious to have us discharge a duty as they see it in Europe.

Hamilton Gives View.

"Now let us not travel the old road of 1916 and 1917. We ought to be thoroughly on guard against the lying propaganda with which the situation will now be smeared."

Questioned as to the quotations, Borah said "the subject was discussed."

In Boston, John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee, expressed hope President Roosevelt's action in the Sino-Japanese crisis would be "consistent with our stand when we refused to join the League of Nations," the Associated Press said.

Hamilton said:

"I have never considered, particularly as an individual, that matters of this type are the concern of party politics. But everybody hopes that the President is taking a course in regards to the war between China and Japan that is consistent with our stand when we refused to join the League of Nations, and that the course is one which will promote peace."

Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, a sponsor of the neutrality act, said, according to the Associated Press, "in spite of our fine words, and notwithstanding our resolution not to mix in other people's business, we are getting in deeper every hour."

Following this country's denunciation of Japan Wednesday as a violator of both the nine-power and the Kellogg-Briand treaties, Secretary Hull made it plain the United States is prepared to accept an invitation to confer with other signatories of the former pact, which guarantees the administrative and territorial sovereignty of China.

May Meet in London.

It was emphasized through the day, however, that President Roosevelt, in his Chicago address Tuesday, had offered collaboration, not leadership, in efforts to "quarantine" disturbers of world peace.

Secretary Hull, at his press conference, reminded reporters the League had passed a resolution calling on its members who are signatories of the treaty to convoke all the signers.

Opinion was expressed by some officials that London would be selected as the scene of the conference.

Ambassador Hirosi Saito, of Japan, yesterday called on Secretary Hull. The ambassador later said he did not protest against the State Department's statement of Wednesday, accusing Japan of treaty violation, but said he had called on his own initiative to "clear up certain points" of information.

He scouted any suggestion the statement might strain relations between the two countries, contending emphatically developments in the Far East have tended to bring about a better understanding by "clarifying the atmosphere."

Secretary Hull earlier had told reporters he had had no comment from the Japanese government on the State Department's pronouncement. Asked if it had been discussed with other American governments before its issuance, he said the United States had acted on its own initiative as one of the pact signatories. As to reaction of other governments to the statement, he was noncommittal. He declined comment, also, on that section of the League resolution calling on League members not to take any action that would "hamper" China in her struggle with Japan.

Application of the American neutrality act to the Far Eastern situation, it was conceded, would be a considerable blow to China, which must import the greater part of her munitions.

To what extent existence of the neutrality law would operate to prevent this country's joining in economic sanctions against Japan, should that step be decided on at the meeting of treaty signatories, was being speculated on yesterday.

Hull declined to comment on the letter from Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, to The Post, published yesterday, in which the United States was urged to stop buying Japanese goods.

It became more likely in the course of the day that other powers besides the original nine signers of the treaty would be invited to the conference, wherever it is held. The nine are the United States, Britain, Japan, France, Belgium, The Netherlands, Italy, China and Portugal. Five other powers, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Bolivia and Mexico since have signed the agreement.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, yesterday recommended Russia and other countries that have interests in the Pacific region be invited.

He termed Russia "the great unknown factor in the situation," but predicted a satisfactory plan could be devised if Japan and China could be brought together at such a session.

2 Garr Brothers Released on Bond

Shelbyville, Ky., Oct. 7 (AP).—Over strenuous objections of the Commonwealth, Roy and Jack Garr were released under $20,000 bond today to await trial October 18, on charges of murdering Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt.

At the same time the court ordered the $20,000 bond of their brother—Dr. E. S. Garr—forfeited when he failed to appear in court this morning for arraignment. Defense counsel presented an affidavit from Dr. H. B. Blaydes, La Grange physician, stating Dr. Garr was in a "bad mental state" and not able to appear.

More Soldiers Are Involved in DavidsonDeath

Slain Business Expert's Association With Service Men Studied.

Additional names of soldiers and marines—most of them stationed at Fort Belvoir or Quantico, Va.—were linked to the strange murder of Elmer J. Davidson yesterday when experts transcribed several shorthand notes found among his personal effects.

That the slain U. S. Chamber of Commerce attorney was apparently friendly with a large number of service men was evidenced by notations listing various places frequented by members of the Quantico and Belvoir detachments, investigators reported.

Although the movements of Virginia State Police Sergt. J. E. McDermott, in charge of the case, were kept secret yesterday, it was learned he planned to question all military men named in Davidson's mysterious notes.

One-Man Job Doubted.

Sergt. McDermott came to Washington yesterday and, accompanied by Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange, of the local homicide squad, is believed to have visited numerous places where Davidson had been seen in the company of strangers.

While insisting that no definite suspects are under surveillance, police are understood to have abandoned the theory that Davidson's murder was a "one-man job."

Credence to this angle was lent yesterday when Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Brady, proprietors of a roadside diner near Triangle, Va., identified a sweater worn by Davidson the night he was slain. He came to their place about 10 p. m. Sunday, the Bradys said, and bought a package of cigarettes from an automatic vending machine.

Another person was in Davidson's car when he parked outside, the Bradys told police, but they weren't certain whether it was a man or woman. Whoever it was, they added, had "a high pitched voice."

While Davidson was making the purchase, another car bearing District tags pulled into a parking space next to his car, said the Bradys. When Davidson left, this car followed. Both machines headed south, but the Bradys were unable to tell how many persons occupied the second car.

Cashed Small Checks.

Davidson, investigators learned, never smoked cigarettes. A package, however, were found in his car after it was wrecked near Triangle more than an hour later the same night. The package, said police, appeared to have been freshly opened.

New mystery was added to the case yesterday when detectives learned that Davidson cashed checks totaling $115 during the month of December. Each check, said police, was for small amounts—$10, $11 and up to $30.

Members of the dead man's family said he guarded his finances very carefully and was not a heavy spender. It was learned Davidson cashed at least one check every day in the month. But instead of keeping track of his expenditures as usual, he made nothing but shorthand notations on each stub, it was further learned.

An examination of Davdison's finances, investigators said, revealed he only recently began making notes in shorthand on his check stubs.

Police have failed to locate the occupants of a car, believed to have been from Pennsylvania or the District, which picked up a man near the spot where Davidson's car was smashed Sunday night.
